First Actual Photograph of Court Scene in Camorra Trial

INCREASE GUARD ON CAMORRISTS

VITERBO, March 23.—Seventy-five additional guards were stationed in the court room to prevent a recurrence of yesterday's riot when the trial of Enrico Alfano, alias "Ferocone," and his thirty-eight fellow Camorrists was resumed to-day.

Ferdinand Di Matteo, who is accused of having Gennaro Cuocolo in his death in the lonely roadway leading to Tenore Del Greco, was placed on the stand and interrogated by President Bianchi of the Assize Court.

Matteo is charged in the indictment with having lured Cuocolo by the promise of a fruitful diamond robbery which might be committed in the Cupa Calastro community. A rich Neapolitan owned a villa there and Cuocolo was to inspect the grounds and plan the robbery.

Accordingly, Matteo and Cuocolo set out to look over the grounds and if necessary rent an adjoining villa in order to further the plans for the great diamond coup. It is charged that, while the two men were walking along the road, Cuocolo was attacked by Matteo and five associates who were in hiding, Matteo striking the first blow.

When this was recited to-day Matteo grew violently excited.

"I knew nothing of that murder nor of the murder of Maria Cuocolo, Gennaro's wife," he cried.

Nicolo Morra is one of the party of five who helped Matteo slay Cuocolo.

"Nor would I associate with Morra," continued the witness. "I have for years wanted vengeance on Morra for betraying the beautiful society, and I would have nothing to do with him under any circumstances."

Morra did not seem indignant at this accusation.

SONO INNOCENTE GIURA MATTEO

VITERBO, 23 Marzo.—Per prevenire le conseguenze di qualsiasi tumulto, in seguito ai fatti ieri verificatisi, oggi, rinpresa del dibattito nella causa contro Enrico Alfano ed i suoi trentotto complici, l'aula rigurgita di soldati. Difatti e' stato ordinato un rinforzo di 75 uomini.

Ferdinando Di Matteo, che e' accusato di avere ucciso Gennaro Cuocolo, in modo che questi corse alla sua morte nella incantevole strada che porta a Torre del Greco, subisce attualmente l'interrogatorio del Presidente della Corte d'Assise, cav. Bianchi.

Il Matteo e' accusato di aver adescato Gennaro Cuocolo con la promessa di un grossissimo furto di diamanti, che doveva essere compiuto nei pressi di Cupa Calastro. Un ricco napoletano aveva colà una Villa, e Cuocolo doveva ispezionare il terreno a fine il piano onde compiere il furto. Secondo il convenuto, Matteo e Cuocolo, scesi per esaminare il campo di azione e se necessario incaricarsi d'affittare una villa vicina, si trovarono soli posto per concretare meglio i piani per il magnifico colpo. Pare che, mentre i due soggetti camminavano soli nella strada, il Cuocolo fu aggredito dal Matteo e da cinque loro compagni che erano nascosti nei dintorni. e Matteo diede il primo colpo contro il Cuocolo.

Matteo Si Protesta Innocente.

Nicola Morra e' uno dei cinque che compirono l'assassinio del Cuocolo.

"Nemmeno io mi sarei associato con Morra in questa impresa," continua il Matteo. "Io nutrivo per anni di vendicarmi di lui, perche' egli tradi' la bellissima società, ed io quindi avrei avuto nulla da fare con lui in ogni evenienza."

Morra non sembro' si fosse indignato della accusa di tradimento; egli semplicemente guardo' il Matteo ed ha' cominciato a torcere i suoi baffi.

Il Matteo, anche lui, si atteggia a vittima, ed egli ha voluto, fara una dimostrazione narrativa oggi, quando, improvvisamente, ha cambiato ed ha gridato, alzando le braccia, come a richiamare l'intervento di un dio, con una voce che rimbombo' come un tuono nell'aula della Corte, grido': "Sono la vittima dei carabinieri ed dei [illegible] travagliatori come fu crocifisso Gesu' Cristo."

Drammatico Incidente.

Gli altri accusati a questo punto cominciarono ad urlare in cuor protestando la loro innocenza, ma furono messi in silenzio dalle guardie in soprannumero. Il seguente incidente avvenne durante l'interrogatorio di Filippiniero e la Corte. L'avvocato imputa il Matteo di aver confessato una lunga lista per Corrado Cerrino, un altro dei presunti assassini di Gennaro Cuocolo. Quando questa altra accusa gli venne fatta, Matteo gridò': "Signor Presidente, io sono innocente. Perche' avrei dovuta fare una lunga lista al scrivo quando egli e' un parrucchiere e avrebbe potuto facilmente farla da se stesso?"

Il Presidente Bianchi replico': "Si, egli e' parrucchiere, ma i fatti dimostrano che egli non avrebbe potuto fare, e voi la faceste per lui."

TORPEDO BOAT BLOWN ASHORE

NEWPORT, March 23.—The torpedo-boat destroyer Burrows, which dragged her anchor in the inner harbor during the southwest gale early to-day and was driven ashore at low tide on a ledge, is resting easily and it is not believed she has been seriously damaged.

Government tugs are standing by to assist in pulling her off when the tide serves and her crew has lawsers bent in readiness to ulling the tugs. None of her officers and men were injured.

The place where the Burrows struck is directly in front of the Summer villa of Frederick Cunningham of Longwood, Mass., and the Cunningham pier is being utilized by the crew of the destroyer as a point of vantage in the work of freeing her from the rocks.

The Burrows left the harbor here about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon for Norfolk, Va. She ran into such heavy weather after a couple of hours that her commander, Lieutenant Julius F. Hellweg, put back, and the craft anchored in the inner harbor. Soon after 4 o'clock to-day the southwest gale struck the hurried with sudden force, and the Burrows dragged her anchor. Before her crew was able to get her into deep water she had struck the rocky bottom.

The Burrows is a new craft. She is 742 tons displacement, with triple screws, and her engines are capable of 12,000 horsepower. Besides Lieutenant Hellweg her complement includes Ensigns Albert W. Penn and Richard S. Edwards and a crew of about seventy-five men.

At 10 a. m. the gale shifted suddenly to the northwest without any diminution of the velocity of the wind, which was blowing at more than sixty miles an hour. Shipping has tied up here, but no accidents other than that to the Burrows has been reported.

MRS. LAWSON SAYS HUSBAND WAS BEATEN

Acting in behalf of Mrs. Maud Lawson of Lynn, who believes that her husband was kicked and otherwise cruelly treated in a manner that hastened his death in the Westboro Hospital for the Insane, Representative Martin L. Quinn of Swampscott to-day announced that he would apply to authorities in Worcester County for an autopsy on the body of Lawson.

More Charges Made.

This action was taken following the decision of Judge Henry T. Lummus, reported through Clerk Charles Leighton of the Lynn Municipal Court, that an order for an autopsy applied for there could not be granted, but would have to come from the county in which the crime was alleged to have been committed.

Quinn declared that he proposed to follow the case to a successful finish. Working with him is L. Hubert Nott of No. 280 Essex street, Boston. It was asserted by Quinn that since he has taken up the West boro case he has learned of alleged outrages in other institutions, one of which he said was at the Gardner State insane colony, where a patient was said to have been killed by an attendant.

"The only thing to be cleared up in this new case, said Representative Quinn, "is whether there was any criminal intent on the part of the keeper. Until I have ascertained that fact the names in the case will not be revealed to the public."

Autopsy is Expected.

It is the desire of Representative Quinn and others who are seeking to have the Lawson case investigated by the Legislature that an autopsy will be held and that an inquest will be ordered.

Lawson's body is in a vault at the Pine Grove Cemetery, Lynn. It was taken there shortly after his death at Westboro a week ago to-day.

"It is my opinion," said Mrs. Lawson, "that the asylum authorities will fight to stave off an autopsy as long as possible. I think that a bleaching fluid was used to remove the marks that were on my husband's body."

Thinks Bruises Were Hidden.

"It may be that by delaying the investigation there would be no way to tell whether my husband had been injured or whether a bleaching fluid had been used."

In case the inquest is ordered Representative Quinn declared his intention to immediately apply for the indictment of the keepers at the Westboro Hospital for the manslaughter, providing the alleged use of the supposed bleaching fluid does not baffle the medical examiner in performing the autopsy.

An amazing story of what she called "outrageously brutal treatment" was told the AMERICAN to-day by Mrs. Florence Foster of No. 138 Chandler street, who was in Westboro State Hospital for the insane for ten days, beginning February 16 last. Mrs. Foster asserts that while in the institution at Westboro she was cruelly treated and was served food she said was unfit for hogs to eat. Her story is all the more sensational and remarkable from the fact that she was not an insane patient, though she was treated as such at the hospital.

Mrs. Foster is silver inlayed and sixty-four years of age. She is the wife of Frank M. Foster, a trusted employe of Walter J. Gliddon of Somerville, member of the Governor's Council. She said today that she was formerly addicted to a drug habit, acquired as a result of following a physician's advice. She gradually broke off, with the result that her nerves were shattered. Through a misconception of the meaning of State hospital, she was induced to go to Westboro. She needed treatment for her nerves. As soon as she discovered her mistake Mrs. Foster protested and finally secured her freedom.

Woman May Be Called.

As a result of Mrs. Foster's charges, Councillor Gliddon has talked with Dr. George S. Adams, superintendent of the Westboro hospital. It is likely Mrs. Foster will be summoned to tell to the legislative Committee on Prisons the story which she gave the AMERICAN reporter.

Dr. Adams is accused by Mrs. Foster of making "thusty" visits to the wards where patients are confined; of being lax in his

LOBBY HOLD-UP ON INCOME TAX

To give the State House lobby more time to wage its campaign against the Income Tax amendment to the Federal Constitution, Senate Chairman Pearson of the Committee on Federal Relations to-day secured a postponement of action on the affirmative resolution which is before the committee.

The committee was scheduled to meet at 10:30 o'clock this morning to take action on the amendment. At the hour of meeting only Chairman Pearson, House Chairman Haigis and Representatives Toomey and Silvester were in the committee room. No attempt was made to secure a quorum, and without waiting for other members to show up Senator Pearson declared an adjournment.

The last day which the committee has for filing its report is to-morrow, and unless the committee acts before the adjournment of the branches to-morrow afternoon or secures an extension of time, the question will go over to the next General Court. An extension of another week will be asked for. If it is granted, the committee will meet on Wednesday to take action. This will give the lobby, which began to get busy yesterday, several more days to "convince" wavering members that "the federal income tax is an outputious proposition," and that "we should have a State income tax that the State may get the benefit of the income derived."

Lobby Sure of Four Men.

The lobby counts these four members of the committee as certain to be against the Federal amendment: Senators Pearson and Turner and Representatives John Carr and Sweeney.

Five members of the committee are unwavering in their loyalty to the proposition. They are House Chairman Haigis and Representatives Harding, Seligman, Silvester and Toomey. Haigis and Silvester are Republicans and Haigis is a leading candidate for Speaker of the next year's House. Harding, Seligman and Toomey are Democrats.

The two members who are on the fence are Senator Hunt of Worcester, a Democrat, and Representative Hart of Dorchester, Republican. Both have openly favored the income tax until within a week, and both favored it in their campaigns for election last Fall. Within the last few days their support of the amendment has begun to wobble. Neither Hunt nor Hart showed up at to-day's meeting. Hunt was nowhere in sight, but Hart was parading about the State House in company with Jack Alderly, a lobby runner for J. Otis Wardwell.

Hunt and Hart Doubtful.

Senator Hunt has been riding to and from the State House lately with Representative Frank H. Hodgdon of Lexington. Pope made a speech in the House last year against the income tax amendment. He said at that time that he opposed the amendment because he was "an old-fashioned Democrat."

All eyes at the State House are on Hunt and Hart. If both of them vote against the amendment the committee report on the measure will be adverse.

WORLD PEACE TREATY NEAR

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Diplomats expect that within a short time announcement will be made at the White House and in European chancelleries of the formation of the world-wide peace federation, organized under the leadership of President Taft.

The first steps toward this organization, they declared to-day, have already emerged, Japan, United States, France and England. The conference held at the White House yesterday are understood to have been marked by important progress in negotiations.

President Taft talked for some time with Baron Uchida, ambassador from Japan, and Robert Bacon, U. S. ambassador to France. Baron Uchida and President Taft are said to have discussed a general arbitration treaty which will embrace Japan, the United States, France and England. With these four powerful nations in a general arbitration treaty, the peace of the world would be assured.

Japan Said to Be Willing.

It has already been semi-officially announced that the British government favors such a treaty. The French government let it be known in Paris that it favored a limitation of armaments and an international arbitration treaty. Ambassador Baron carried Frances' answer to Mr. Taft yesterday. Japan, menaced in Manchuria by Russia despite existing treaties, if she should go to war with the United States, is understood to be very willing to be a signatory to a treaty with the three other countries which would assure a fair share of the far eastern trade and to for all time her control of Manchuria and Korea.

The four countries named would be able to preserve the peace of the world by forces if necessary under the treaty, the nations to agree to limitation of armaments.

Treaty Well Under Way.

Diplomats say that the treaty is now well under way and will be simultaneously announced in Washington, Tokio, London and Paris. It is supposed that Austria, Italy, Russia and Germany are being sounded by Washington on these plans. These countries undoubtedly will join such universal peace pact, with the possible exception of Germany. But if Germany should not become a signatory she would find herself occupying an isolated position.

A prominent diplomat here said to-day: "Should such a treaty be made, and there is small doubt that something of the kind is under way, it would mean in time the partial disarmament of the nations, the limitation of armies and navies and one of the greatest forward steps ever taken by humanity since war and diplomacy began."

SHIPS DELAYED BY HIGH WIND

A northwest gale, blowing off shore at sixty miles an hour, is sweeping the New England and Nova Scotia coasts and sending sailing vessels scurrying for shelter.

Shipping along the coast is practically tied up, hardly a sailing vessel daring to leave harbors or safe anchorages to-day. Only two or three of the fishing fleet are back in Boston harbor, and these got in last night before the gale attained its full fury. It is feared there will be a shortage in the fish market to-morrow.

The tug Richmond and her tow, the barge Ohio, went aground at East Chop, at the entrance to Vineyard Haven, early to-day. The tug with the Ohio and the barge Mary B. Mitchell, was seeking shelter when the hawser became fouled with her propeller. Before it could be freed she and the Ohio had been drifted on to the sands at East Chop. The Mary B. Mitchell got her anchors down and held safely. The tug Aurora succeeded in freeing the Richmond, but the Ohio is hard and fast.

A large fleet of sailing craft sought shelter in Vineyard Haven, and scores of vessels are riding out the gale on the lee shore of Cape Cod.

Boston Is Belated.

Several steam vessels due here to-day are being delayed badly by the storm. The Boston, from Yarmouth, reported by wireless that she was bucking the gale in Massachusetts bay and would be fully four hours late in docking.

Despite the wind, the largest fleet of foreign and coastwise steam craft that has entered the harbor in several months came in early to-day. They did not encounter the storm, as most of them arrived late last night in the lower harbor before the wind rose. The foreign-owned vessels brought in cargoes valued at more than $5,000,000.

Among them were the Red Star liner Manitou, from Antwerp, with forty passengers and a heavy freight; the British tramp Schiehallion, from Chinese and Japanese ports, with a rich cargo of Oriental products; the Leyland liner Berian, from Manchester; the British tramp Hannah M. Bell, from Port Tampico, Mex.; the Holland-American liner Zuyldyk, from Rotterdam, and the Warren liner Sagamore, from Liverpool.

Wind Breaks a Leg.

A strong wind that blew a blanket over the head of a horse attached to a dump cart of the Metropolitan Park Commission at Revere Beach was responsible for the breaking of the leg of William Nabb, a laborer and driver of the team. Nabb was standing in the cart just behind the blanket bathouse loading barrels when a gust of wind blew the blanket over the animal's head. Nabb was thrown out and one wheel passed over his leg just below the knee. He was taken to the Frost Hospital in Chelsea.

MARCH OFFER NEARING END

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

To revive an old slang term, to-day is "twenty-three for March."

It is the twenty-third and this lively, breezy month of March is taking the slang term literally. March is moving on as though a policeman were at his heels. In fact, in eight days more, March will have retired to the rear of the calendar to make room for April.

Therefore, one week from to-morrow night, on March 31, at 10 p. m. the month of March will be sealed so far as receiving March subscriptions in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest is concerned.

The double March offer, with its special votes bonus and Buick automobile prize, will come to an end in eight days more.

Also, in eight days more, the main contest, with its 1,000 prizes will be half over.

Take it all in all, the last day of March is a mighty important way station in the swift flight of this contest.

The Contest Editor would like to own the sky for the rest of this month. Why would the Contest Editor like to own the sky for the rest of this month? Because, he would polish it by day and illuminate it by night with a colossal sign, extending over all New England and warning candidates in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest that March is going fast.

For to-day and to-night the Contest Editor would have his sky-sign read:

ONLY EIGHT DAYS MORE

Every day he would make the number of days less. He would do all this just to impress on candidates as forcibly as possible that March is fleeting and that time grows less and less in which to take advantage of this double March offer.

No, all you candidates, just listen to what the Contest Editor tells you and work like good fellows during March's participation.

Do you realize that March may be the real deciding month in the main contest? There is more depending on March than this prize of a Buick automobile for the one polling the highest vote by subscription between March 1 and March 31. That prize is a splendid offer in itself.

But bear in mind that this special vote bonus of 5,000 votes for subscriptions in lots of ten expires at the end of March. And that special vote bonus enables candidates to pile up vote credit at tremendous rate. Therefore, the standing of hustling candidates now being rushed in March as never before.

It is more than likely that the winners of the big prizes in the main contest will be able, at the end of the contest next June, to look back and say:

"Why, all my March work backed up by that special vote bonus offer, that landed me where I am."

No wonder it is of prime importance to all candidates to whirl in and make these March standing days in March count big—g—BIG!

RUSH ORDER TO RECRUIT ARMY

CHICAGO, March 23.—Although the army of the United States is at present about 7,000 men above the quota for this season of the year two messages from the War Department urging all possible speed in getting more recruits have been received at the Chicago recruiting headquarters. It is the first time in the history of the office that messages so urgent have been received in time of peace. The message says: "Use every effort to procure recruits for infantry without delay. Urgent. If necessary keep open day and night.

Lieutenant F. H. Kenney and his recruiting staff will work day and night to get every available man. Twenty-five thousand circulars are being distributed. The recruiting office is usually closed March 1 his station house.

FINED $200 FOR BOXING BOUTS

Boxing in Hyde Park received a body blow to-day in the Dedham District Court when Judge Emery Grover fined Michael T. Mullen, treasurer of the Hyde Park Athletic Club, $200 each on four counts of promoting public boxing matches and sparring exhibitions at French's Opera House, Hyde Park, during the months of December, January, February and March. Mullen appealed and was held in $800 bonds for the Superior Court.

The police allege that the Hyde Park Athletic Club claimed a membership of from 1,500 to 2,000 members, and that each member was to pay $20 a year for dues, but that no member had paid except in the way of tickets for boxing matches, when seats were sold for 50 cents to $2 apiece. It is claimed that at each match about 250 persons were present.

FIREMAN RISKS LIFE AND STOPS RUNAWAY

BAN ON 'EASIEST WAY' TO STAND

Mayor Fitzgerald today refused to reverse his decision ordering the management of the Hollis Street Theatre to discontinue the performances of Beaseo's "The Easiest Way." In spite of his ruling, the sale of tickets continued to-day.

Following the conference at the Mayor's office yesterday, at which permitted the play to be presented last night, owing to the inconvenience which would result to the public otherwise, the theatrical folks to-day hoped that he might allow a limited version of the drama to be given which would meet the ideas of both the Mayor and Police Commissioner O'Meara. The Mayor to-day made it plain that he would not approve of the play at all, believing it dalphous to the morals of the community because of its general theme, no matter how much it were expunged.

"It is my impression that the show will not be presented to-night," said Mr. Fitzgerald. "That was the understanding reached with the theatre management yesterday. This is also the attitude of the Police Commissioner."

Cannot Be "Pruned."

"The report to me—I have not seen the show myself—is that the whole tone of the play is injurious to public morals, and that being the case, my office and that of the Police Commissioner agreed that it ought to be stopped."

"Have any steps been taken toward pruning the show so that it would not be objectionable?" the Mayor was asked.

"I do not understand that this could be done," he replied. "Those who saw the production and reported to me gave me to understand that the whole tenor of it tended toward depravity."

Here is the tribute that Eugene Walter, author of the play, pays to the Mayor of the University, in commenting on the stopping of the drama:

"The only reason Boston can have for stopping the play is that it is the wickedest city in the country and the story of the play seems too closely home to them."

Another conference, however, was to be held to-day with the Mayor and Police Commissioner O'Meara, in an effort to find some middle course by which the objects could be fulfilled. Those in charge of the production professed themselves ready to make such changes in dialogue and action as the official censors might suggest. But the ban was placed upon the drama not because of single lines or situations, but because the play as a whole was found objectionable.

The Mayor's Letter.

The Mayor's letter forbidding further presentations was sent to the management of the theatre yesterday afternoon. It reads:

"Dear Sirs—You are hereby notified that in the opinion of both the Police Commissioner of Boston and myself the public show, amusement or exhibition entitled 'The Easiest Way,' now being given at the Hollis Street Theatre, tends to injure the morals of the community, and therefore the whole of said play or exhibition is subject to this objection, and I request that it is now obtained at the next performance stopped. If it is not, the license is hereby be under date of September 3, 1910, will be suspended until such play is withdrawn from your stage. Please reply at once through the mail. Mr. Casey.

Respectfully,

"JOHN F. FITZGERALD, Mayor."

"It is a matter of regret that neither the Mayor nor the Commissioner witnessed a performance, but delegated that duty to subordinates," was the comment of Charles J. Rich of the Hollis Street Theatre and Benjamin F. Roeder, manager for David Belasco, who staged the production.

Reply From the Theatre.

Then the following statement was given of the theatrical attitude:

"Mr. Charles J. Rich of Charles Frohman, Rich and Harris, managers of the Hollis Street Theatre, and Mr. Benjamin F. Roeder, general manager for David Belasco, were surprised at the sudden action of the Mayor and Police Commissioner in ordering the withdrawal of 'The Easiest Way.' The fact that the play had been presented in practically every large city in the country without objection would indicate that it would meet with the approval of Boston. The unanimous tribute to the play in the newspapers of this city is also significant. Had any objection been raised the management would gladly have acted upon it.

"The position of the Hollis Street Theatre in the twenty-five years it has been open and the high standing of Mr. David Belasco in the theatrical world should be sufficient guarantee that neither the piece nor the management of 'The Easiest Way' would lend approval to anything that would offend. It is a matter of regret that neither the Mayor nor the commissioner witnessed a performance, but delegated that duty to subordinates."

Action Final, Says Mayor.

Early to-day Mayor Fitzgerald said his decision was final. He was told that the sale of tickets for future performances was continued last night.

"Yes, I know," said the Mayor, "but you can say that 'The Easiest Way' is barred—that the last performance has been given in Boston. The 'easiest way' is a hard way, to my way of thinking, and I am of the belief that the whole play is wrong and that it should be entirely wiped out."

Commissioner O'Meara saw the play Monday and Tuesday nights and they reported adversely. Under the law, the police commissioner and the Mayor must act jointly in ordering the withdrawal of a show. The Mayor said that the police commissioner in ordering the withdrawal of "The Easiest Way" on the fact that the play had been presented in practically every large city in the country without objection would indicate that it would meet with the approval of Boston. The unanimous tribute to the play in the newspapers of this city is also significant. Had any objection been raised the management would gladly have acted upon it.

FRANCES STARR, LEADING ACTRESS IN BARRED PLAY

MISS FRANCES STARR

TROUSER PERIL IN "HAREM" FAD

After the harem skirt—what?

Trousers, hideous, unsightly, inartistic trousers, says Mrs. Alma Webster Powell.

And after trousers?

Knickerbockers! answers the same oracle.

And after knickerbockers?

"After knickerbockers, the deluge overwhelming every quality of modesty and charm and sweetness associated with the name of woman."

It is the very same Mrs. Alma Webster Powell of Brooklyn who invented the human costume—precursor of the harem skirt.

But just as a father may disown a wayward son, so Mrs. Powell, still arrayed in her black and white human costume, rises to denounce the harem skirt, which she claims is a degenerate sprout from the parent stem.

"I am disgusted—utterly disgusted—with newspaper clippings I receive from all over the country which are known to me as the mother of that harem horror!" exclaimed the handsome Mrs. Powell, curling up our western city I was denounced by name from the pulpit, and a friend of mine who lives in Trieste, Austria, wrote me the other day, saying: 'Your costume, the harem skirt, has arrived in Trieste via Paris, and is now being worn in our streets.'

Her Coiffure Roman.

"What do you think of that? I design a costume for women which I intended to be more modest and more dignified in the modern gown, and it is taken up and distorted and made into something unmeroi and hideous at the same time. You see my costume now. It is simply a long coat to the ankles, buttoned from top to bottom over bloomers which are always concealed and which I wear because I consider them more hygienic than skirts.

"But to say anything about the long coat always buttoned which suggests a harem skirt!"

That was not. Frankly, Mrs. Powell looks very pretty and not unduly daring in her human costume. She has cut her long black hair and now wears it in loose curls about her head, which was bound with a wide fillet of dull red and gold. When in France, just after the revolution, when crazy about everything Roman, and changed the names of the months to Thermidor, Fructidor, etc., the women contributed to the classical revival by wearing their hair just as Mrs. Powell does. Coiffure a la Titus, they called it then.

Divided Skirts and Husbands.

"But your costume has bloomers, practically harem trousers," Mrs. Powell was reminded.

"But always hidden. I wear them for convenience and I believe all women will eventually follow my example." Mrs. Powell answered. "The knell of the petticoat has sounded. But that does not mean that we must borrow the trousers of the harem. Why should we take the clothes of those poor harem slaves to express our ideals of womanhood?

"What I suggested some time ago that with the divided skirt of the harem we should to be consistent, have the divided husband as well. Why quite a year, why should women imitate men? I suppose because the poor things appreciate the privilege of liberty with masculinity and masculinity with trousers. But no one that men wear skirts in certain parts of the world are we going to follow them in that. If you are going to see men why not outside their virtues, their boldness, their broadmindedness, their loyalty to each other, instead of merely trying to steal their trousers?

Trousers and "Bony Shanks."

"Mark my words, if the harem skirt is generally adopted by women, a few years from now will see our seat in trousers. And is there anything in the world more hideous than trousers, two semi-fitting cylinders that may be pinched in at the knee the wearer takes a seat?

"Then you can imagine a row of men in a street car sitting with their legs spread apart, with perhaps from 6 to 8 inches of bony shank showing? Imagine a row of fashionable women would look like! Think of the class of women that would take advantage of it, and how much the custom would add to the now disgusting little tricks of the man-chaser. What possibilities of revelation there would be in hitching up of a feminine trouser if it were worn by a pair of legs of woman that would naturally wear it!

"Yet you say that trousers will follow the harem skirt," was suggested.

"I hope American women are far too sensible and modest to adopt the harem skirt," Mrs. Powell answered.

Cribs All iron white enamel Crib, brass trimmed with 2-inch posts, silver gray finish, has arrived this week and now wears it in loose curls about her head, which was bound with a wide fillet of dull red and gold. When in France, just after the revolution, when crazy about everything Roman, and changed the names of the months to Thermidor, Fructidor, etc., the women contributed to the classical revival by wearing their hair just as Mrs. Powell does. Coiffure a la Titus, they called it then.

Divided Skirts and Husbands.

"But your costume has bloomers, practically harem trousers," Mrs. Powell was reminded.

"But always hidden. I wear them for convenience and I believe all women will eventually follow my example." Mrs. Powell answered. "The knell of the petticoat has sounded. But that does not mean that we must borrow the trousers of the harem. Why should we take the clothes of those poor harem slaves to express our ideals of womanhood?

"What I suggested some time ago that with the divided skirt of the harem we should to be consistent, have the divided husband as well. Why quite a year, why should women imitate men? I suppose because the poor things appreciate the privilege of liberty with masculinity and masculinity with trousers. But no one that men wear skirts in certain parts of the world are we going to follow them in that. If you are going to see men why not outside their virtues, their boldness, their broadmindedness, their loyalty to each other, instead of merely trying to steal their trousers?

Trousers and "Bony Shanks."

"Mark my words, if the harem skirt is generally adopted by women, a few years from now will see our seat in trousers. And is there anything in the world more hideous than trousers, two semi-fitting cylinders that may be pinched in at the knee the wearer takes a seat?

"Then you can imagine a row of men in a street car sitting with their legs spread apart, with perhaps from 6 to 8 inches of bony shank showing? Imagine a row of fashionable women would look like! Think of the class of women that would take advantage of it, and how much the custom would add to the now disgusting little tricks of the man-chaser. What possibilities of revelation there would be in hitching up of a feminine trouser if it were worn by a pair of legs of woman that would naturally wear it!

"Yet you say that trousers will follow the harem skirt," was suggested.

"I hope American women are far too sensible and modest to adopt the harem skirt," Mrs. Powell answered.

Most Remarkable Suits in Boston at the Price

The E. T. Slattery Company offer for your inspection Suits of the most exclusive style—of a superior order of workmanship and of a better grade of material and trimmings than is possible to obtain elsewhere in Boston for equal price.

Many people in Boston believe, because the E. T. Slattery Company's styles are superior—because the designs and styles are smarter and more exclusive—that their prices are higher. This is really a much abused idea, and the E. T. Slattery Company take this occasion to demonstrate and to prove that such is not the case.

STOCKING GIRL INVADES SENATE

She looked as natty as "Yoshe, the Suffragette," they she was ten times prettier than Mr. T. E. Powers's young woman, who has been the writing room pest of the honorable Senate of Massachusetts, everybody said "Votes for Women," quite instinctively. For a long time nobody dared to come near, so primitive a man as Senator "Jim" Bowers of South Boston broke the ice. Senator Powers had a long and apparently delightful conversation with the young lady. He wrote his name and address on something. Then he sent "Freddy," the telephone page, to call Senator Brown of Medford to the writing room and he, too, wrote his name and address on something.

The pretty young lady smiled and chatted, and Senator Brown he smiled and chatted, and then he wrote his name and address on something.

White of the Cape was the next senatorial lucky man. One by one they came and saw and chatted and laughed,—and wrote their names on something.

Only Senator Francis Quigley of Holyoke refrained from writing his name and address. Jim Powers wrote him a note:

Dear Frank:—There is a charming young woman out here in the writing room who has some elegant stockings to show. I think you would be interested.

"Freddy" Jenney brought back the answer:

Dear Jim—I do not care to see the young lady's stockings. At any minute there may be a roll-call on the Moody Boynton bill.

There was such a demonstration in the writing room when the answer came back that "Yoshe, the Stockingette" made them show it. Then she looked a few more offices and went away from there.

Consideration of the Boynton bill was postponed.

Nickerson, No. 28 Hyde Park avenue, and John A. Kenney, secretary of the meeting, was instructed to send a petition to the school committee.

PRISONER'S CHANGE MAKES COURT LAUGH

Albert Snook was a prisoner in the Chelsea Police Court to-day following a spree. He had blown in from a Maine lumber camp, and was celebrating his return to his home town. He was roughly treated, and long unkempt hair, and a beard which nearly covered his chest, as the station house a large roll of bills was found on him in the lodge of his coat, from which the prisoner himself furnished bail. When Clerk of Court Joseph M. Cerbey called the name of Albert Snook in court to-day, a handsome, clean-shaven, prosperous looking young man stepped to the bar. Thinking there had been some misunderstanding, Clerk Cerbey continued to call, whereupon the young man proclaimed his identity to the amazement of all. In the interval, Snook had procured a shave, and a new suit of clothes. The transformation was astounding, and the mercifulness caused by the change lasted some minutes. He was fined five dollars, which he paid, all from the same big roll.

Lungs Declared Sound—Life Insurance Granted.

If you knew a remedy that really had cured Tuberculosis, that had saved from death quite a number of people, would you try to get Consumptives interested in it and induce them to take it; or, would you say nothing about it, for fear of giving offense?

We know the medicine. We know the people cured—some of them. We have the stories of cure of many—and affidavits from some. We advertise Eckman's Alterative to tell those who have lung disease what has been done by its use. Investigate the following:

1618 W. Dauphin st., Phila., Pa.

Gentlemen: "On the evening of May 13, 1907, I had five hemorrhages from the right lung. My hemorrhages kept up for one week—I had twenty-eight in all. Septic pneumonia developed. My doctor told me I had better go to some other climate, as my left lung had also become affected.

About that time I met Howard Klotz, 1519 Susquehanna ave., this city, who had hemorrhages several years ago and who was cured by Eckman's Alterative.

I started to take Eckman's about the last week of May, 1907. My hemorrhages continued at least about ten days, but began to gain weight. I increased steadily. Later, a very bad bronchial cough developed. I was coughing and I moved to get a nurse on my right lung. My doctor told me I was going to have bronchial abscess and that it was affecting the acute nerve. The lungs were and lungs gradually disappeared. Have not had any trouble of that nature since.

I weighed 120 pounds when ill and I was assured by the best physicians that my consumption had developed fast and previously rejected me.

I have advised several people to take Eckman's and those who took it faithfully had the same results as myself.

(Signed Affidavit) CHAS. MORGAN.

Eckman's Alterative cures Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Affections. For sale by all Retail druggists throughout the world. Drug Dep't and other leading druggists. Local booklet Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

PLAN NEW SEA LINE TO MAINE

State Street and transportation circles are interested in a report that several well-known Boston financiers have planned a new steamship line to run from Portland to Wiscasset, Me., with railroad connections with the Wiscasset & Waterville railroad, tapping a freight terminal now controlled by the Maine Central railroad.

A new Summer resort section will be opened up by the new line, it is reported. The company has been organized, and will soon ask for incorporation. Its only ocean competitor will be the Eastern Steamship Company. The charter for the Wiscasset & Waterville Railroad admits the extension of the line to Burnham Junction and Farmington, and this would mean the opening of a large territory. Lower freight rates are promised by the new line.

NEW YORK ASKS BOSTON FARES

How Boston commuters on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad are more favored than similar unfortunates in New York State was brought out at the hearing before the Senate Railroads Committee of the New York Legislature on the Wainwright bill. The measure empowers the Public Service Commission to establish the same schedule of rates for passengers entering New York over the New Haven lines within the commutation zone as are charged for similar service in the corresponding Boston zone, where present rates are less than half what they are in New York State.

It was shown by Major Fiske of Mt. Vernon and others that the newly increased straight rate from that city to New York, a distance of less than fourteen miles, is twenty-five cents, while the charge at the Boston end is only one cent a mile.

'KISS OF DEATH' BARRED BY BILL

The "Kiss of Death," as the practice of threading shuttles on cotton looms by mouth suction has become known, is prohibited Monday in cotton mills, in a bill favorably reported in the House by the Committee on Public Health.

If it becomes a law, the bill will practically end the gruesome custom manufacturing in this State. It will mean the installment, in the place of the old-fashioned mouth suction threading shuttles, of some one of the several self-threading shuttles which have been invented. It will mean the expenditure of thousands of dollars.

It is claimed that until operatives contract pulmonary diseases by the old-fashioned method of threading shuttles.

BAR AND BOTTLE BILL FIGHT ON

The prohibitory interests and the liquor interests are drawn up to-day in battle array at the State House, both sides looking for a vote on the repeal of the Bar and Bottle bill at 4 o'clock this afternoon. It was expected that the debate would occupy an hour and a half.

The Bar and Bottle bill was passed by the Legislature of last year, to take effect on May 1 of the present year. After that date, unless the law is repealed, no license will be allowed to sell by the glass and by the bottle in the same establishment. The enactment of the law has been regarded as one of the greatest victories ever achieved by the anti-saloon folks in Massachusetts.

Several bills aimed at a repeal of the law have been introduced in this year's Legislature, all were referred to the Committee on Liquor Laws. In each case the committee reported that the petitioners be given "leave to withdraw." Senator Grafinger of Everett and Representative Doyle of New Bedford, O'Neil of Boston and O'Donnell of Boston, members of the committee dissent from this report.

EAST BOSTON FIRE RESCUES

Representative Dennis A. O'Neil and Patrolman Van Cunningham of the East Boston police station broke down a door and ran to the third floor of a burning building at Nos. 69 and 71 Maverick square, East Boston, and woke Mrs. William Pitts and her four children and escorted them in safety to the street. For an hour men standing in the square smelled smoke, but could not place it. Just before midnight O'Neil saw a flash of light in the rear of the building, which is occupied by Hanora Martin of South Boston. W. F. Tuck occupies the first floor as a bakery and store. Smoke filled the building. The damage was about $30a. The cause of the fire is not known.

WOMEN SMOKERS GAIN A CONCESSION

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The Treasury Department recognizes the right of the fair sex to smoke either cigars or cigarettes in the new customs regulations issued to-day. A woman may import free of duty fifty cigars and 300 cigarettes, as many as men are allowed.

TREE WARDEN A LATE RISER

Echoing the sentiment of a certain noted New York man, Fletcher M. Abbott, tree warden of Boston, says to remark: "It is none of the public's d— bust tness was. time I get up in the morning!"

There is opposition, says Warden Abbott, although he serves the town without salary. John D. Hard- is one of the warmest opponents. It is charged that the warden sleeps late in the morning and that while he slumbers his assistant is compelled to begin work. Abbott is an arboriculturist and looks after the trees of the famous Pembroke college town.

"Why, it's the talk of the town," asserted Hardy, "that he does not get to work on the trees early enough in the morning. Think of a man who does not begin work until after 9 o'clock! And his assistant is kept waiting outside of the house for him. This town must wake up in the morning sooner, and so must Abbott."

To which Abbott responds with the emphatic remark quoted at the beginning, and adds:

"All this objection does not stir me in the least. I know how to take care of trees. All the talk from Hardy, my assistant is doing is rank balderdash. I know how to care for the trees of this town and I'm going to care for them. I give my attention to them.

"As for the assistant having to wait for me in the morning—Hardy gets his orders for the next day the night before, so that I don't have to get up to give them to him."

AUTO ETIQUETTE—Something funny for autoists, victims and observers. In the City Life Section of the Sunday AMERICAN.

BOSTON DELEGATE TO CONVENTION OF SUFFRAGISTS

FLORENCE H. LUSCOMB.

SUFFRAGISTS OFF TO LONDON

Three Boston suffragists are planning to sail for Europe, where they will take part in the big suffragist parade and demonstration in Albert Hall, London, and attend the International Suffrage Convention in Stockholm, Sweden, in June.

They are Miss Florence Luscomb of Allston, Miss Margaret Foley of Dorchester, and Miss Alice Carpenter of Radcliffe. Miss Luscomb and Miss Foley will sail from April 5. Miss Carpenter will leave Boston two weeks after. Miss Luscomb, who is a graduate of Technology and an architect, is the official delegate from the Massachusetts suffragists organization to the international convention. Miss Carpenter and Miss Pankhurst, the young English suffragist who recently visited Boston, has written to the Boston headquarters welcoming the Massachusetts delegates and she says that if the Women Suffrage bill which will be debated in the House of Commons soon after the American delegates arrive is defeated, there may be some exciting militant demonstrations in which the American delegates can take part.

CUSTOMS RULE FOR TOURISTS

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Secretary MacVeagh has approved a new customs ruling which the Treasury Department expects will do much to reduce the troubles of returning tourists from Europe and will minimize attempts to smuggle personal belongings.

Under the law every American returning from abroad is entitled to bring in free $100 worth of personal belongings. The customs rulings hitherto have been susceptible of elastic interpretations, and many troublesome incidents have arisen. The new ruling makes specific announcement of what articles a returning American may bring in free to the value of $100, as follows: Clothing, toilet articles, jewelry, personal ornament, cameras, fishing tackle, guns, musical instruments, steamer rugs, toys, wheels, valises and trunks.

These things will be considered dutiable: Household goods, books, pictures, tableware, table and bed linen, and similar articles, unless used by the owner in year abroad. Goods in the piece will have to pay duty, as will presents for others' purposes or articles of any nature for sale.

Persons claiming American proof will be required that they have abandoned their homes in the United States and have taken bonafide residences abroad. Nonresidents of the United States, however, not being in personal effects for their own use, comforts or conveniences, or articles of adornment without limit of valuation, under the usual regulations.

MAN BUYS EGG HE OWNED 4 YEARS AGO

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 23.—Harry Burns of Hornell yesterday purchased a dozen eggs in a grocery store. The gentleman said that the eggs were fresh country laid. Burns examined his eggs and found his name and address written on one of them. While he was an employe of a local garage five years ago he had written his name and address on that very egg.

TILLMAN SINKING AFTER SECOND SHOCK

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Friends of Senator Tillman of South Carolina fear he may never be in his seat again. His condition has grown much worse since his second stroke of paralysis.

JUDGE BLAMES GAYNOR FOR VICE

NEW YORK, March 23.—In a statement made public to-day, Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan holds Mayor Gaynor responsible for a disorganized condition of the police force and for the prevalence of vice and crime in the city.

"The prevention and detection of crime is in the hands of the police," says the statement, "and Gaynor rules the force. He has curtailed the power of the commissioner, attempting to exercise it himself, and by so doing he has demoralized the force and made sure the way of the crime grower.

"The town is by far more open than ever under Devery; there is not the slightest attempt made to enforce the excise law; there has never been a time when the more serious offenses connected with the social evil flourished with such impunity; gambling houses and poolrooms have increased and now run without molestation, save for a few spectacular raids, and the evil of the collector's graft is as rampant and as profitable as it ever was."

BARRIE STATUE TO PETER PAN

LONDON, March 23.—Peter Pan is to have a statue in his honor at Kensington Gardens. Sir George Frampton is the sculpiar and J. M. Barrie the donor. The statue will be exhibited at the forthcoming academy.

Mr. Frampton's monument suggests a spreading tree, in the crevices of which live fairies and little things of fields and trees—squirrels, rabbits, mice; small things that are coming out into daylight for the first time. Perched on the top of the tree trunk, pipes in hand, is piping for them the quiet fairy, the herring transferred to Peter's feet is smiling up archly into his serious face. Long after the audience is gone, the statue will be cast in bronze, a process that will occupy nearly six months.

CROKER DESCRIBES 'NEW IRELAND'

Former Tammany Boss Compares Erin of To-day with the 'New South' Seen in America.

NEW YORK, March 23.—Richard Croker, booster for Ireland, instead of Richard Croker, American politician and former boss of Tammany.

The once powerful leader of Tammany Hall stood at his favorite window in the Democratic Club yesterday afternoon, and while feasting his eyes upon the gay panorama of Fifth avenue told an AMERICAN reporter of the New Ireland.

"We have our new South over on this side," he said "and I've seen the new South grow. But you have heard nothing here about the new Ireland, which I am seeing grow. It's not the same Ireland it was twenty—yes, even ten—years ago. It has taken on a new life and has started all over again to develop into the richest, most prosperous and contented country of Europe."

The veteran politician's eyes glowed with enthusiasm and there was a note of yearning in his voice as he added:

"And how beautiful Ireland is—always green, and it is ever restful to the eye. I have traveled a bit in my time and I know of no spot on earth as beautiful as Ireland. I am dying right now to get back there. I'll be there again within three weeks and then I'll be happy."—Richard Croker.

"Never Such an Awakening."

Mr. Croker's rapture was occasioned by his visitor having shown him an excerpt from a speech recently delivered in the House of Commons by Winston Churchill on the difference between the Ireland of to-day, intellectually, socially and industrially, and the Ireland of 1886, when Gladstone made his first great fight for home rule, and of the astonishing changes that have been wrought in the people since the passage of the "Land Tenure Act."

"Mr. Churchill doesn't tell the whole story—no, not even half of it," declared Mr. Croker, after carefully scanning the excerpt. "I don't believe the annals of the human race show such an awakening among a whole people as is now going on in Ireland as a direct result primarily of the restoration of unity to the Irish themselves. There is no comparison at all between the Ireland of my boyhood days and the Ireland of the present.

"It is with awe and joy at the last twenty years only that a comparison can be made. In that time I have seen my own eyes and enjoyed with my own heart a development that rivals any tale in fiction.

"In that time social order has taken the place of anarchy, prosperity has succeeded poverty and happiness has driven out misery.

"Even the new land act no poor man need be without a home of his own in Ireland—a home that belongs to him and that he can bequeath to his heirs.

"Dismissing the harrowing recollections of the misery and poverty of the Ireland of my boyhood, let us come down to so much a time as twenty years ago. Even then two or more families lived in a single hut with a mud floor—and this they had to share with their pigs and goats.

"Now every family in rural Ireland lives in a modern house that its own tenant by the government and paid for by the owner in front so low that no gifted young man can complain of the cost as a hardship.

Government as Benefactor.

"All this marvelous change has been brought about by the new land act passed by the British Parliament. Under that law, if you are a poor man in Ireland, and you can apply to the local board that constitutes a part of the Irish Land Commission and have a part of my surplus acres set aside for your use and occupation. The government will buy the land from me, and you will be appraised by the board and turn it over to you after putting a one-story stone house on the land, at a cost of about $2,000.

"You owe me nothing. Your entire indebtedness is to the government. You pay out of your crops or other earnings to the government every year a fair annuity to a minimum of about 2½ per cent. interest on the total investment.

"Why, in the last two or three years the government has put eight of this kind of tenants on my land, five miles out of Dublin. Mark it, the government did not ask me if I wanted to sell these eight pieces of about an acre each to the tenants who now occupy them.

"Each of them let the land board of the Land Commission know that he wanted one piece of my land with a house on it. There was no argument at all. The board simply appraised each parcel and dispossessed me in favor of the poor man who needed it.

"The tenants on it now are hard-working men and they are rearing respectable and happy families.

"That is so much better than the poverty and misery and crime of the Ireland of my youth that I am only glad that the new dispensation has been delayed in by the present land laws. Each has a pretty little garden around his house, and flowers now grow where rank weeds used to grow.

Houses for Day Laborers.

"This class of tenants, you must understand, are not farmers. They are day laborers.

"But if one acre can thus be taken by the government and turned over to poor tenants, larger tracts can be taken by the same process. Those larger tracts, from twenty-five acres up, are cutting up the great estates of Ireland and converting them rapidly into small farms.

"It is that that is making Ireland happy and prosperous. For the first time in centuries the Irish people know that by work and good order they can own the soil on which their oppressed ancestors for generations toiled, without price or reward, for absentee landlords. It is telling not only in the increased production of Ireland and the contentment of the people, but also in the growth of population. The figures show that emigration from Ireland has dropped remarkably in the last ten years. The people are staying at home, because they are coming into the land they love."

"In the meantime has the attitude of England toward Ireland undergone a change?"

"You have put the cart before the horse," Mr. Croker replied, with a whimsical smile. "The attitude of Ireland has changed toward England. England is slow to change. But Parnellism has given place of Fenianism among the Irish people. Instead of dynamite and the dagger, they are now appealing to the sense of fairness of England. Fenianism is dead; Parnellism is more vital than when the machine of politics and peace was preached by its founder. As a result there is more England to work, and they are making the glorious old Island blossom like the rose."

Then Mr. Croker made a startling announcement, "If," said he, "I am misreading his words exactly to suit his thoughts—if Ireland were not under a foreign flag my advice to the young man in crowded America, especially the East, would be a paraphrase of Horace Greeley's advice forty years ago, when I was a young man in New York, 'Go to Ireland, young man.' It is a poor man's land.

"All we need now to fill Ireland's cup of happiness to overflowing is home rule, and we'll get that very soon now. By home rule I mean a parliament for Ireland, just as Canada and other loyal possessions of Great Britain have."

NO SPOT ON EARTH LIKE IRELAND, SAYS RICHARD CROKER

We have our new South over on this side, and I've seen the new South grow. But I am seeing the new Ireland grow. It's not the same Ireland it was twenty—yes, even ten—years ago. It has taken on a new life and has started all over again to develop into the richest, most prosperous and contented country of Europe. And how beautiful Ireland is—always green, and it is ever restful to the eye. I have traveled a bit in my time and I know of no spot on earth as beautiful as Ireland. I am dying right now to get back there. I'll be there again within three weeks and then I'll be happy.—Richard Croker.

ENGINE KILLS FATHER OF SIX

Michael McSweeney was killed near the Freeport street grade crossing on the New Haven railroad, in Dorchester, to-day. He was run down by an inbound Mattapan train and died instantly. He leave a wife and six children.

McSweeney bade good-bye to his wife and children after breakfast at his home, No. 274 Hancock street, and started for the wharf of the Doherty Coal Company, on Freeport street, where he was employed. How he came to be on the railroad tracks is not known. The man's body was thrown high into the air as he was struck by the cow-catcher.

The death of McSweeney leaves his wife and children practically penniless. Mrs. McSweeney is ill. They had no money to keep up the premiums on the husband's insurance policy and it has lapsed.

The youngest child is only eight weeks old.

McSweeney only a couple of days before Christmas, while walking along Dorchester avenue, fell and broke his leg. He was in the City Hospital several weeks. He secured work again only last Tuesday. The little money the family had saved was used up while the head of the family was in the hospital.

The family owe six weeks' rent and grocery bills. There is no money to pay for the burial of the husband.

HARDWARE MEN CHOOSE STACY

Frank E. Stacy of Springfield was to-day elected president of the New England Hardware Dealers' Association at the concluding session of the three days' convention in Mechanics' Building. The complete list of officers elected to-day is as follows:

President, Frank E. Stacy, Springfield.

First vice-president, W. H. Sawyer, Portland.

Second vice-president, H. P. King, Portland.

Treasurer, H. M. Sanders, Boston.

It was entered that Henry Russell, the retiring first vice-president, would be elected president, but he declined the honor, and Mr. Stacy was elected.

The convention adopted a resolution today asking Congress not to change any of the schedules of the present Payne-Aldrich tariff law, and also adopted a resolution favoring the proposed increase of postage on magazines. Both resolutions will be sent to Washington.

Delegates from the association will leave Boston to-night for Little Rock, Ark., to attend the convention of the National Association of Hardware Dealers. These delegates consists of J. B. Hunter and D. Fletcher Barber, ex-presidents of the New England Association; H. B. King and H. S. Hitchcock.

Blood, seventy-five years old, of No. 54 Sanborn street, Reading, who was noted as an authority on lumber, dropped dead in front of the office of Palmer & Parker, lumber dealers, in Medford street, Charlestown, where for forty years he was employed as foreman. He was talking with Irving F. Palmer, a member of the firm, when stricken.

DIAZ REPORTED TO BE WORSE

HAVANA, March 23.—Cipher dispatches received to-day from officials close to the government in Mexico City declare that the situation throughout the republic is becoming graver. President Diaz is very ill and his physician has been recalled. The dispatches say that the presence of Bernard Reyes in Mexico is imperative, as Minister Limantour, who has apparently taken over the government, is unable to cope with the situation.

TO HELP OTHERS

The people quoted in these columns gladly tell anyone interested how the Osmo-Chemic Physicians cure Deafness, Asthma and Bronchitis.

To help others is the motive that impels those who testify in the cases of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians through the medium of the daily press. Gratitude is the chief motive, and heartfelt but not strong enough to endure a modest, unobtrusive manner in giving their ailments, although a thing of the past, to the public eye through the medium of the daily press.

Sympathy for fellow sufferers and a desire to help them is the principle and means of cure for their ailments is the strongest motive. The incredulous or ignorant may suggest a baser motive. But intelligent, thoughtful people would scorn such a suggestion.

Miss Nellie Donovan, who resides at No. 18 High St., Revere, said: "Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians have treated me my hearing has returned."

Mrs. A. Bryant, who resides at 457 Cross St., Malden, said: "I was treated by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians and the ringing noises have ceased and I hear perfectly again."

Mrs. Margaret Kimball, 121 Oliver St., Lindell: "I was so deaf in my left ear that I could not hear any sound with it. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear a watch tick."

Mrs. Fannie Record, who resides at No. 15 Vancouver st., Boston, said: "I read in the daily papers how the Osmo-Chemic Physicians had restored the hearing of Mrs. C. S. Barker, who resides at 256 Spring St., Medford, Mass., after she had been practically stone deaf, and how Mrs. J. B. Lockett, who resides at No. 138 Western Ave., Cambridge, Mass., of a serious ear disease, was restored to hearing. Under the Osmo-Chemic treatment my hearing improved rapidly. All my friends notice how well I hear again, and remark about it."

Mrs. F. B. Taylor, 302 Centre St., Jamaica Plain, says: "The Osmo-Chemic Physicians cured me of bronchitis that threatened Lung Disease."

Mr. Arthur Dale, who resides at No. 67 Saratoga St., East Boston, said: "Eighteen years ago Bronchial Pneumonia left my lungs weak. Since then I had suffered from Asthma and Bronchitis. I had almost lost all hope when I heard of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians. I had to submit to a number of days' delay after a few treatments, as a great change that meant a new lease on life, a return to health and strength to me."

WOMAN BARES CRUELTY TO INSANE

NEW INVESTIGATION MAY FOLLOW REMARKABLE REVELATIONS OF CONDITIONS.

Sutton. Mrs. Foster also alleges that a letter she wrote her husband in which she related the alleged brutality began when she was twenty-three years of age. She was troubled with sleeplessness. Her doctor prescribed morphine. She took it. She quit taking it when she felt no inclination.

"Several years would elapse," she explained. "Then I would take it again. I was young and strong and so could control myself. Later in life, it proved more than I could withstand—that temptation to take morphine. Last October I began to give it up gradually and underwent treatment at Melrose. But the lack of morphine left my nerves shattered.

In Need of Treatment.

"I thought I needed treatment at a hospital. My husband talked it over with Councilor Cuthbert, his employer. He conferred with Dr. Edward Johnson of Chelsea. It was decided I could go to Westboro for treatment, under the State law. I went before Judge Bolster, sitting in the Probate Court, in Boston, February 1.

"I did not know the true nature of the Westboro institution. I did not know the State was misleading to me. It was three days after I was there that I discovered that it was for the insane. The first night, I was given a bath. I was put to bed. Yes, but I can't conceive of worse punishment.

"It was Friday, February 10, that I went to Westboro. As I look back at it now, they believed I was insane. I think that they would have dared to treat, as they did me, any woman they thought acting.

"That first day they put me into a bath tub. They stripped me of all clothing. Flannels, which I always wore, and had to wear to keep my hands warm, were taken from me. My spectacles were removed, which left me blind as a bat. My grip fell black from white without my specs.

"I protested against such outrages, because I did and believe that was necessary in my case. I was not insane! I was to be treated decently, at least. I was cold, and I shivered. I cried. They joked me and told me to shut up. I couldn't help crying. I was in despair. They threw a light cotton nightie over me. That didn't warm me. It made me feel all the more miserable.

"Then two nurses came after me. They took me out. I was barefooted. They ran me over the rough cement walks. It was cold. I was zero. I could swear to that. It was nothing less than ice. They ran me up the stairways. These were cold, too. The air chilled me to the bone, too.

"They finally shoved me into the violent patients' ward. They put me on the floor and threw down a mattress and cotton covering and told me to go to sleep.

With Shrieking Woman.

"I was terribly cold. About me women screamed and shrieked, poor things. They were violently insane, so I learned. They nearly drove me insane, too. I think a nearly drove me insane, too. I think a nervous person would be driven crazy if kept confined there, especially if they are nervous.

"From 11 o'clock that Friday night until 6 o'clock the next morning I nearly froze. The cold was intolerable. I've told of it given me a chill, almost. I shudder at the memory.

"Next morning I was called before Dr. Adams, the superintendent. I told him of the bin and told him I had stockings. He had heard of what happened to me. I told him the truth. I was barefooted. I told him I had kept crying because I was suffering from my nervous trouble and cold. I told the doctor I felt had to think what humanity was being treated to me. Some one had suggested the straitjacket for me because I was crying. I said I didn't like the violent patients. How could I be quiet when I was being driven wild with the torture of it all?

"That night there had been a woman, evidently a foreigner, whose duty it was to race her noisily around the ward. I counted holes into the cells to see if everything was all right. I had hysterics. She made me laugh in spite of myself. She made did her work conscientiously. She made a show of flashing the lantern each time I spoke to her. She asked me with a plain accent:

"Why you no conduct yourself?

"This woman kept torturing me all through the night. I didn't get a wink of sleep. It was like being in hell. Fog would drift about the ward. The light in my face and taunt me. She would gargle her lantern in my face.

"I was wearing my hair cut short. So she jeered me by saying, 'Hello, Johnny.'

Wouldn't Obey.

"The next day, Saturday, Dr. Coles, one of the house doctors, called for me. The nurse wanted me to put on my stockings to answer the summons. I told them I wouldn't, because when I had been taken them the night before, and needed them, they had refused them to me. I told him, too, I was freezing to death; that the nurses had threatened to 'feed' me. That's a very disagreeable thing, so other patients told me. They feed one with a tube inserted through the nose. I had not taken any food, because I felt too bad, and the food was the cause of it. I can't help using such words now and then, because I think plain language is the only kind that will describe conditions at Westboro.

"Out there, come around about 5 o'clock in the morning and call you to wash your hands, you are told to eat what they give you. You can't see it, the light is so dim. I couldn't see because I didn't have my glasses. I told them I wouldn't eat such slop—and as that; that I wouldn't eat anything I could not see. They almost me shamefully.

"Dr. Coles wanted me to fill out some sort of paper. He said they would make a new woman out of me. When I complained, he said: 'We ought not to treat you that way,' and then smiled as if it were a good joke of somebody. I told him how it had upset me. I told him about sitting doubled up on the mattress, unable to keep warm, for seven hours; that the hospital was a horrible place, that he should help me get out.

"Couldn't Bear Tortures."

"If he thought me crazy, I can hardly blame him, for my tortures had been too great for me to bear. I was bitter, and I think justly so. It was terrible to have those young nurses, some of them mere girls, ridicule me as they did.

"I saw them carry corpses after corpse out of the men's department. That is, they looked like corpses to me. But they might have been alive. If they were, I feel sorry for the poor wretches. God only knows what happened in there.

"A sane person with the treatment they get at Westboro would go insane. It would be bound to happen. They don't cure by their treatment there. They make the cases worse.

"The food they served me wasn't fit for a decent hog. I put up a protest. There was a strike," and I was still protesting and going without food because I couldn't stomach that which they set before me. After that I was put in a room where I convinced of my claims and the fact my husband was right. I was given a bed, supported eggs and good steak.

"Dr. Coles serve pea soup which you could pick hairs and which would turn a man's or woman's stomach. Also he served soup paste. It is paste, and the tea and coffee they serve here is not even fit tea or coffee. There is no sugar.

"They served me a sort of thing they called gelatine, but it is nothing of the kind. I couldn't eat it. But those poor hungry people, who are as fine as gold before the food. They don't know the difference. It was enough to make one's heart bleed. They would make silly faces because the same people ignorant as the food.

"I have seen the women patients dip their hard bread into pea soup to soften it. They give a slice of white and a slice of brown bread. They serve no butter, and as if it was the best morsel in the world it touched me with pity.

"Stew a Starchy Fluid."

"A lamb stew they served looked like a starchy fluid. Some of the less insane patients are called on to help serve, after the pots are brought from the wards. They are apt to dish the stuff out irregularly. One woman gets two or three morsels; another would get a heaping plate full. But they never know the difference.

"The butter was so vile I couldn't eat it. When I entered the hospital I was called by the name, as I said before. It took three days to convince me where I was. I asked about it, and learned it was a hospital for the insane. I insisted I there wasn't one decent ward where cases of minor order could be treated. They said there was none. But after I protested and told them a few things I got better treatment in every way.

"One day they took a poor soul out a woman out of my ward. I never saw her again, nor knew what became of her.

"Mrs. Strickland, one of the nurses, was a very nice woman. She seemed very much disturbed. She even told me to keep quiet.

"Just before I left, one woman in my ward, where there were thirty beds, became violent. They put her in a straightjacket and kept her tied to her bed all night.

"My husband was at the hospital four times to see me. Each time, but he never got sight of the super.

"Seven days two days a week. My husband telephoned from his office. He believed it hard to raise anybody at Westboro. He called for Dr. Adams.

"Before I went to Westboro, Mr. Gibbden had told my husband, if I did not like the place that arrangements would be made for me elsewhere to be treated. After I finally got word to my husband as to the treatment had been accorded me, he told Mr. Gibbden and Dr. Adams was called to Boston.

"On Tuesday after I entered the hospital I wrote my husband a note asking for Dr. Adams. You have to leave the letters open so they can be read. I believe a lot of letters never leave there. If they want to send them, they do, and if they don't, they don't send them. They do what they please.

"That letter of mine reached my husband the following Monday, a week after I had written it. They were evidently in no hurry to allow my complaint and request to pass out of the hospital. Another letter was sent me by a woman who had befriended me, and to whom I had written. Her letter was dated February 24. It was postmarked March 1. I have no doubt they held that letter over.

"All the patients there who know anything, are of one mind. They all want some relief from the present brutalities and cruelties. Some few heads are still level, despite the fact that they are ill-treated and ill-fed. Some days they served us a boiled dinner with pig's feet for the meat part. Some days fish stew and some got the skin and gristle.

"There must be a make-off for somebody there from the food. I can hardly believe the State would agree to feed its patients as they are fed. There must be graft somewhere.

cusation of betrayal, for he merely glanced at Matteo, then began twirling his mustache.

A demonstration was narrowly averted during the interrogation of Matteo, when the prisoner suddenly flung himself on his knees and raising his arms screamed in a voice that echoed through the court:

"I am the victim of the carabineers and they would crucify me as Christ was crucified."

Dramatic Incident in Court.

The other defendants cried out, but they were subdued by the additional guards. This dramatic incident followed a number of passages between the prisoner and the court. The indictment had charged Matteo with manufacturing a false beard for Corrado Sortino, another of the alleged slayers of Cuocolo. When this charge was pronounced Matteo cried:

"Signor president, I am innocent. Why should I make a false beard for Sortino when he is a wigmaker himself and could easily have made one himself?"

President Biancoli replied:

"Yes, he is a wigmaker, but our evidence shows that he could not make a beard, whereupon you made it."

At this point Sortino arose in the prisoners' cage and interrupted the proceedings.

"Allow me to show you that I can make a beard and I will demonstrate that I can do so in this court," he cried.

The president reassured Sortino that his interests would be protected by the court and the interrogation proceeded.

SAYS WOMAN'S IDEAL IS LOWER

Declaring that the "Woman of to-day is not quite so good as the Eighteenth Century Woman," Mrs. Anne Nathan Meyer gave an interesting talk at New York under the auspices of the National League for the Civic Education of Women. Mrs. Meyer is a successful author and writer.

Mrs. Meyer began her talk by stating quite firmly that she was not anti-woman. She admitted—nay, she gloried in her anti-suffrage sentiments, but she wished it distinctly understood that these did not necessarily mean she disliked women. As a matter of fact, she really liked women, had friends among them, and all that sort of thing.

"But," objects Mrs. Meyer, "whether or not women agree with me as to the undesirability of women having the vote, at least all intelligent persons must admit the suffragists are using three methods in endeavoring to obtain it which are a great mistake. These three reprehensible methods are:

"Militancy.

"Spread-bunism.

"The pathetic appeal.

"To be accurate," continued Mrs. Meyer, "militancy is adopted. The English suffragettes will tell you the Eighteenth Century Girl Prime Minister of England are in fact waging a civil war. They say that they are trying to overthrow the English Government. If they were they would knock off the Prime Minister's head instead they merely knock off his hat.

Merely "Nagging Nuisances."

"The militant suffragists are not doing anything nearly so dignified as dying for their cause. They merely make nagging nuisances of themselves.

"As for 'spread-bunism,'" said Mrs. Nathan, "I coined the word myself and I am rather proud of it. A certain weekly printed an editorial upon it and kind enough to say that the word needed no definition, that it was an entire picture in itself.

"You see it on all sides, 'spread-bunism,' among the women of to-day. Most shocking instance I noticed: I perfectly unjustifiable.

"Why have women ever purified that they claim they can purify still more if they are enfranchised? How have women used their opportunities?

"If we were to tell the truth, might we not have to admit that the cigarette smoking, cocktail drinking women of today is not quite so good as the Eighteenth century woman? Is it not true that many of the women who have grown up a little nearer to his ideals, while woman is hovering here?

No Reform by Legislation.

"Of course, the suffragists will answer this by saying they can prove through statistics that men are less moral than women. They will tell you our prisons are filled with men, while there are comparatively few women behind the bars. You know, I have heard that suffrage argument. I've given it to myself until I think of the answer. Did you ever stop to think that when a man is made angry and takes what we may call the easiest way to get it he invariably results in an assault for which he may be imprisoned? On the other hand, when a woman is angered and wishes to get even she takes the easiest way to obtain it she does not commit an offense for which she may be imprisoned.

"Signor president, I am innocent. Why," said Mrs. Meyer, "I personally do not believe that reforms will be instituted through legislation in any case. I think when we women believe this we are taking hold of the wrong end of the stick.

Preserve Health and Beauty.

"A woman said to me recently: 'What is the good of voting? It won't prevent poverty while there is a saloon on every corner to tempt him?' I want to vote so that I may have the saloons abolished and then I can bring up my son in his own home, knowing that when he leaves it all my work will not be undone.' And I," announced Mrs. Meyer, "replied to the woman by saying: 'Madam, I wish to bring up my son so that even were there a saloon in the same house with him it would not be a temptation to him.' And there you have Mrs. Meyer's point from which we must work.

PROMOTION FOR LOMASNEY KIN

Oscar L. Lomasney, a nephew of Martin M. Lomasney, was to-day named by the board of principal assessors as office and street clerk in the assessing department. Edward A. Burke was given a similar position, both appointments being made to fill vacancies.

There was a lively scramble for the two places among the street clerks in the assessing department. Both Lomasney and Burke have been in the department previously, and the appointments are in reality promotions.

Lomasney has been in the department but a short time, having previously been employed in the supply department of the city. He was backed for promotion by Martin Lomasney and other Democratic leaders. Compensation is fixed by the work actually performed and the position is credited with being worth about $2,000 a year.

FOUND IN DOORWAY, DEAD OF EXPOSURE

The body of John L. Cooney was found near a flight of stairs leading into the cellar and living room at No. 280 Northfield avenue early to-day. It is supposed that he was stunned by a fall and perished through exposure. The medical examiner will view the body. Cooney lived at No. 13 Dacia street, Roxbury, and was a machinist in the Kendall boiler works, South Boston. He was fifty-eight and a widower with five children.

GERM THEORY OF DISEASE

Corrective Processes in Healthy Bodies Depend on Pure Blood.

"The Blood Is Really the Power That Defends the Body."

The paragraphs quoted below are reprinted by permission from an article in Success Magazine, entitled "Our Billions of Invisible Friends." Copyright, 1908.

"The germ theory of disease is now a misleading phrase, for the germ theory has been definitely established as a fact, modern science tracing perhaps nine-tenths of all diseases to the action of those invisible yet truly living organisms, the germs. * * *

"The power for mischief of the germs is chiefly due to two things: first, the rapidity with which they multiply under favorable circumstances; and, second, their power to form those poisons known as toxins and ptomaines. Some of these are more deadly than any other poisons known to man; deadlier than the most venomous of the snake poisons, being capable of bringing about highly poisonous effects in doses so small as to be almost inappreciable. Each germ produces its own peculiar sort of poison, and each sort of poison produces its own kind of effect. The rising of the body's temperature which occurs in fever is due to the invading of the blood by fever-producing poisons formed by the action of germs. The strange processes of ulceration, inflammation, and suppuration, or forming of pus, are due to germ-formed poisons.

"These are only a few of the charges against germs, but they are very well founded. We can sue for our admirable protecting forces they would long since have overwhelmed us. But now, thanks to the corrective processes of the body itself, we can not only resist their advances, but also take them prisoners of war, and make them serve our needs.

"These corrective processes are naturally most active in healthy tissues, and practically all conditions of the body as to health spring from the condition of the blood.

"The blood is really the power that defends the body."

If the blood is made and kept pure by a great blood purifier like Hood's Sarsaparilla, an army of invisible friends is made larger, stronger and more successful. The result is the restoration of perfect health.

Especially in the spring season it is vitally important that the languid and impoverished blood be corrected. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the original and practically the only spring medicine of any reputable standing today, should be used in every family.

EAT SAUERKRAUT, LIVE TO BE 100

To live to celebrate the 100th anniversary of your birth, eat sauerkraut. If you prefer, try buttermilk and the result will be the same.

Not since the distinguished Russian savant, Professor Metchnikoff made the startling discovery, several years ago, that if one drank buttermilk every day of one's life, one would live far beyond the century mark, has any similar discovery, touching on and appertaining to the things we eat and drink made such a sensation as the one announced the other night at Cincinnati by the Rev. Earl Fiyan, of Berkeley, Cal., that the Pleistan sauerkraut, affinity of the "hot-dog," contains the germ of longevity.

A tremendous discussion has ensued. Professor Metchnikoff's championing of buttermilk was accepted offhand. He it, in the first place, a man of science, and his mere say-so would suffice. But when he pointed to the hardy mountaineers of Bulgaria, who are very, very old, and are all of them, confirmed buttermilk bibblers, scepticism, which had ventured to raise its head for a moment, shrunk back, abashed and confounded. But the Rev. Earl Fiyan is only a preacher of the gospel, and proof of his theory has only his own seventy-four years to point to, and that is a long way from the century mark.

Now, to Dr. Wiley.

To settle the controversy, which has been raging with increasing acrimony over the virtues of the German national dish, a reporter interviewed some of the leading authorities on things gustatory and edible. He hastened off to the Cosmos Club in Washington, where Dr. Harvey Wiley, foe of the food adulterers and "preservers," indulges in viands guaranteed free from benzoate of soda.

The reporter's journey was not in vain. He found the protector of America's stomach sitting before a groaning table, a platter of roast beef, conspicuously labelled "entered under the Pure Food law, Serial No. 987,654; a jar of mustard, Serial No. 6,789; a bottle of ale, Serial No. 303,030," and, to the reporter's gratification, a huge mess of sauerkraut.

Across the table sat Coroner Holtzhauser.

"Ah, what do I see?" began the reporter by way of opening the discussion airily. "What do I see?"

"Yes, tell us, what do you see," boomed Dr. Wiley.

"Sauerkraut without a serial number," exclaimed the reporter.

"Say, can't a man eat at least one thing without bothering about the Pure Food Law?" demanded the Pure Food champion.

"Sure, go as far as you like," chimed in Coroner Holtzhauser.

"Waiting for a job," spoke the reporter, with a meaning smile at the Coroner. "but, seriously, it is true, Dr. Wiley, that sauerkraut contains the germ of longevity?"

"Sometimes it does and sometimes it doesn't," was the cryptic rejoinder. "I don't care to commit myself."

Dr. Wiley Has Fears.

"Don't quote the doctor on the subject," broke in the coroner. "He is very cautious in his statements, for I know and we were talking about, sauerkraut when you came in. You see, he is afraid that we Americans will become a race of suicides. It's bad enough now, but if we should begin to eat the food of long life and wouldn't be able to die, maybe never, why we'd have to commit suicide when we got tired of living. You know that the Danes call suicide 'doin' the Dutch'?"

"Yes, yes," pressed the reporter."

"Well, the Germans are the discoverers of sauerkraut. Make the most of this answer."

To a cafe the reporter found that sage and savant, Herr Doktor Teufelshorn.

"Who is dot man Flynn, dot sheaks sooch foolishness, hein? Donnerwetter, vot is dienze gomish to, ven ever peasoon can speak sooch dumheiten?"

A long draw from the stein which the waiter had brought in response to the reporter's order calmed the Herr Doktor's righteous wrath, and he proceeded.

"To tell you de truth, the Referent Mr. Flynn is pooty close to the facts."

"No?" said the reporter.

"Ja, shen sir," answered Herr Doktor Teufelshorn. "Ver-ry nearvely, he stoomled on truth—on the sleutlik truth. But he mized it, and shpoke before he had further unterstoodings.

"Ah-h-h-h," said the Herr Doktor, when he had set the stein down again. "Now, young men, I will ans'er the question I hef put so scientifically. The germ of longevity is contained in the sauerkraut, dot is dere. But it is not in the kelsoge. Dot I hef already demonsdrated. Vell, vere ise it, den? Ah, dot is de point.

"The germ of life is contained in the cauroway seed.

"Ve Germans hef known dis segret effer so long, and dot is vy ve are so longlifed. Vell, goot day, mein lieber. Komm again venever you desire auburidative information on sientific matters."

PECK EVIDENCE IS NOW ALL IN

A deposition from Richard C. Tetherington, managing editor for the P. A. Munsey Company, in which he declared that that company's contract with Professor Harry Thurston Peck for a number of articles from his pen had never been terminated, was read to-day at the trial of Professor Peck's libel suit against the Boston Post.

Professor Peck's case closed at 10:35. Before the defence made its opening a long conference was held with Judge Dodge at the bench. Two depositions, one from Mr. Tetherington and another from Frank H. Dodd, of Dodd, Mead & Co., were the last bits of testimony offered by the plaintiff.

Professor Peck was for years Latin professor at Columbia University. In his suit against the Post he asks $100,000 damages, alleging that an article printed in the Post of July 24 injured his reputation and damaged his income.

Two Depositions Read.

The depositions read to-day were called for yesterday by Attorney Francis for Professor Peck. They were taken for the defence. Attorney Francis wanted to offer them in part to-day. Judge Dodge asked if Attorney Pugh, for the Post, had any objection. Mr. Pugh stated that he would not consent to their being read unless read in full. Judge Dodge so ruled.

The deposition taken from Mr. Tetherington stated that he was secretary and managing editor of the P. A. Munsey Company. These questions were then read by Attorney Pugh and the answers given by Attorney Francis.

Q—Did P. A. Munsey have a contract with Professor Peck under which he was to write articles for Munsey's Magazine? July 24, 1910. A.—There was an agreement, but I do not know that it was a contract.

Q—Was that agreement or contract oral? A.—Yes. It was made in 1909 and Professor Peck agreed to write articles for which we were to pay $125 apiece.

Q—Has that contract ever been terminated? A.—No.

Income of an Author.

Q—When did you first see the article printed in the Post? A.—On August 5, Professor Peck called my attention to it.

Q—Did you have any talk with him about this article? A.—I told him that it would not be advisable for us to have any more articles from him under his own name for a time at least.

Q—Did P. A. Munsey called for any articles from him since July 24? A.—No.

Q.—How much did his contributions average per month in money? A.—$400.

Q.—Do you know Professor Peck's reputation on July 24, 1910, as a writer. A.—Yes, his reputation was high; he was considered as able scholar and writer.

The deposition from Frank H. Dodd was then read. It stated that this firm had an agreement with Professor Peck for a series of articles, but that after seeing the article in the Post Mr. Dodd had written his firm that it would be impossible for them to print any more articles under Professor Peck's own name.

Each of the articles treated on some phase of human nature. They were about equally divided as to sexes. The titles of them are: "Beauty," "What Women Like in Men," "What Women Like in Women," "What Men Like in Women," "What Men Like in Men," "Woman's Rights," "Husbands and Wives," "Platonic Friendship," "Summer Types of Men and Women," "Memorable Love Letters," "Pursuit of Man," and "Strength in Women's Features."

Mr. Pugh's Argument.

In opening the case for the Post, Attorney Pugh said:

"This action is for an alleged libel. No newspaper has a right to attack a man. It may criticise a book or a play, but not the man. For example, It may say that the book tells of a quack remedy, but it must not say that the book is the work of a lunatic. If it says the man is a lunatic, I say the paper is liable. I contend that with a book such as this we have a right to review it. I want to show you that this article in the Post was nothing unusual—not anything specially prepared for the occasion. On the contrary, it was one of the usual book reviews.

"The part of the reviewer is to take something from which to write, something to make a readable story. We will show you that there was not the slightest malice or ill will on the part of the reviewer of the paper toward the plaintiff, but that the review is a fair one.

"We will show you that the reviewer did not pick out the worst things in the book. He might have picked out much more and worse things than were picked out. I will now read you a portion of the book."

Judge Dodge interrupted at this point. He told Mr. Pugh that he had better tell the jury he would read portions of the preparation of book views.

HUNT SLAYER IN MOUNTAINS

BURLINGTON, Vt., March 23.—Cyrus Moffat, sixty, a farmer, is dead in the mountain village of Beartown, as the result of a fight over a girl at a kitchen dance last Saturday night, and Fred Depluiss, thirty, a lumberman, is being hunted as the slayer. The fight, it is alleged, was caused by rivalry between a son of Moffat and Depluiss over a young woman violinist, who furnished music for the dance. Moffat took a turn at the violin at the request of his son, in order that the woman might become young Moffat's partner for a waltz.

When Depluiss saw the younger Moffat dancing with the violinist, it is said, he became greatly angered, and striding up to the couple floored young Moffat with a blow to the head. The older Moffat immediately went to the aid of his son, and it is alleged that Depluiss hit him with his fists.

Moffat was stricken insensible. The physicians found one side of the man to be paralyzed, and he was suffering from a leakage of the brain. They administered aid, but the man became gradually worse, and died without making any statement.

The mountainous district is hardly within the pale of the law, as the population consists of a few lumber camps. Many stories of brutality and crime have been reported from its fastnesses, but few authors of the deeds have been brought to justice because of the difficulty in apprehending them. Not long ago a deputy sheriff was shot a short distance from Beartown while endeavoring to capture a lumberman.

BEACHMONT CHURCH THREATENED BY FIRE

A fire started from suspicious origin threatened to destroy the Catholic Church of Our Lady of Lourdes at Beachmont. The fire was in the dwelling house of Max Johnson, No. 86 Atlantic Avenue. It was necessary for the firemen to keep the church well wet down in order to prevent the flames from spreading to it. The damage was $2,000.

CONSTANTINO GETS PINCHED

Constantino, the great tenor, has been pinched. It was a Fenway policeman who yanked him out of a taxicab and made him accustomed with the Park regulations yesterday, and constantino now awaits with the fortitude of a hero the summons into the Police Court.

Spring arrived at Hemenway street yesterday. It blew into the open window of Constantino's flat, at No. 116, and tickled gratefully the nostrils of the tenor, as he broke his breakfast egg.

"Ah," remarked Constantino to his twin sons, Antonio and Ricardo. "It is the printemps that is upon up," and he gally chanted the words of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song." "After breakfast we shall go for promenade in the park."

When Constantino rises for a walk he always takes a taxicab. It is less fatiguing, and since he signed his contracting for Buenos Ayres at $2,000 a night, and the same as a barrel organ, he keeps one standing all day outside his door because he likes to hear the taxi meter click.

Well, Constantino, accompanied by his son Antonio and his son's dog, stepped into the taxicab, which already registered $27.50, and started for their walk in the park. Constantino closed all the windows and was thus enabled to enjoy the Spring air without danger to his throat.

All Was Spring Until.

After half an hour the Constantino dog got restive. When this dog gets restive it is not pleasant to occupy the same taxicab with him. He is one of the largest bulldogs which ever ate a trunk, and he enjoys the mild gentle disposition of a two-horsed rhinoceros.

"He wants to run about in the road and enjoy the Spring, remarked Constantino when the animal had playfully eaten up one leg of a $50 pair of trousers belonging to his son Frederick. So the taxicab was stopped and the dog was permitted to depart. Then the walk resumed with the animal padding along behind.

"Hist," said the policeman, with a majestic gesture.

The taxicab stopped with a suddenness that brought Constantino's nose against the glass front.

"What do you mean by letting that dog loose?" demanded the officer.

"Ah, how no you do," said Constantino, who delights to talk English. "Is Spring is in the air."

"Don't you know it's against the law to let dogs loose in the Fenway?"

"Yes, it is a fine dog," replied Constantino, affably.

Antonio Constantino can speak the English language and considerable slang, but he came to the scene.

"We did not know."

"Can't you read the signs?"

"No we cannot read English."

"Well," said the cop, "ignorance is no excuse, or there wouldn't be anybody at Deer Island. What's yer name?"

Constantino replied the tenor grandly.

Great Insult.

"Constantino what?"

"Constantino, Constantino. That is my name."

"What's your first name?"

"Constantino's enough. There is no other. Everybody knows who I am."

"Oh, do they? Well I don't, and come across with your first name or I'll take you to the box."

"It is Ricardo," said the boy.

The policeman produced a notebook and a stub of pencil.

"Florence," he wrote. "That's a woman's name, but maybe the judge will overlook it. Co-n——. How do you spell that last name.

"Co-n-on, s-t-a-n-t-i-n-o, t-i-n-o."

"Co-n-on-s-t-a-n-t-i-n-o-t-i-n-o," finished the cop.

"You will be your real name and be quick about it."

"Made it dis," cried Constantino, "He asks the real name of Constantino, the great tenor, Caramio. This is no great insult."

This gave Constantino that stage at the end of the house at which he always arrives every time he lets out a yip, explained the chauffeur. "If you don't behave yourself you straight goods and he'll get the summons all right."

"Oh, very well," said the policeman. "Make him take that dog upstairs into the taxi and get out of here."

Constantino protested, but now a whitey child was in the air. Constantino set with folded arms, just as he does when they are going to bang him in "The Girl from the Golden West" that night at the first visitor at the Constantino mansion was to be his tenor, who forced himself to hear the worst:

"You tell me how they can make me go, or do they kill the dog?"

"Neither. They may fine you five dollars."

"Five dollars! Bah," Taking a twenty dollar bill he lighted one end of it and when it burst into a bright flame touched it to his cigarette. Then he dropped it into the cuspidor. "What is money?" asked the great artist.

WIFE MUST GIVE "PIGGIES" BACK

LONDON, March 23.—Robert Harbaugh Sherard, the author, ruefully admitted in court that he was a member of the "Piggies' Bathing Club" and that his second wife, Irene Osgood, author of "To a Nun Confessed," not only had elected him from their home, but was illegally keeping six little white pigs, a nine Persian cat and a gray hunting horse.

The Court ordered Mrs. Sherard to return the pigs, the horse, the cat and the cat's traveling basket, as well as the legal papers relating to Sherard's divorce from his first wife to her husband.

Piggie Wife's Gift.

Sherard and his second wife quarrelled after about two years of married life and the wife entered suit for a judicial separation. This suit is awaiting adjudication in the High Court of England.

Sherard was ejected for the third time in October last from his London Bloomsbury home by order of his wife, who says he has since refused to surrender his belongings. The evidence showed that Mrs. Sherard who is quite wealthy, gave to her husband, who is poor, the gray horse and the six little pigs.

The gift of the shoats was due to the wife's delight at success achieved by her husband in rearing other swine which had swept the mud flat under his direct care and had been sold for high prices at auction.

The cat was Sherard's own purchase, and when the wife refused to surrender it she paid $40 to the court to cover its value. This the bereaved husband refused to accept, and the court he said with some emotion that it was the cat itself and not the money he wanted.

Wept Over Cat.

"It was the only genuine friend I had at Guildsborough Hall and the only thing that reconciled me to existence there," he added, with tears in his eyes.

He pleaded that the divorce papers were to the utmost value to him, as they were the only evidence he could produce in case the wife should at any time be of a mind to prosecute him for bigamy.

"Then I should be sent back to Guildsborough Hall. It was an absolute necessity, he said, that I should have some one accountable for anything but his wife. He insisted that although he was the husband he was treated worse than the meanest dog about the place.

"The whole thing was an American sort of invention," was the way he put it to the court.

When questioned as to his relations with his wife Sherard said he was only the husband. I was told on my arrival at Guildsborough Hall that I was never to give a single order to any of the servants."

Did All the Work.

When he acted as his wife's secretary before their marriage he got nothing for his work, and when he married her she, owing to a clause in a marriage settlement, allowed him $100 a year.

"And I earned every penny of it," was his comment.

The wife's lawyer asked: "Didn't your wife prior to your marriage to her give you $1,000 so that you could buy an outfit as much as you needed to become her secretary?"

"No," replied Sherard; "but she did give me $500 so that might divorce my first wife and marry her."

Questioned about one of his plays entitled "Diamonds Are Trumps," he admitted his wife had written it, adding that she had also written a single word of the things that had been published in her name in the last five years except one suggested sentence. Here he exclaimed with a dramatic gesture for the benefit of the court, "I——am Irene Osgood."

DOG RUNS AWAY FROM FARREN'S BURLESQUE

Harry Farren of the Columbia Theatre says that because he runs a burlesque house is no reason why his ball pup should run away. The pup, named Jack, Jack is a screw-tail bridge Boston bull, with white-shaze face and happy disposition. He was raised by Farren, who says that at his home, No. 11 Allston street, Dorchester, Farren didn't let Jack go to the theatre much, the pup being only two and one half years old and susceptible.

Jack was let out to play in the sunshine yesterday, and when it came back to go home to bed. This is his first stay-out-all-night performance in Farren's kennel. He doesn't know whether Jack has Spring fever, but has gone to the Mexican border or is decorating the explanation table of some vivisection class.

PHONE EARNINGS TEN PER CENT

The report of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company for the year ended December 31, 1910, shows earnings equal to 10.1 per cent on $323,345,000 outstanding capital, against 9.01 per cent, on $256,475,000 capital at the end of 1909.

The surplus carried over after the payment of 7 per cent. on the stock was $6,079,971, or $19,959 greater than for 1909.

Some of the income is derived from its holdings of securities of other companies and its real estate ownership. It owns $350,062,938 worth of associated companies' stocks, $37,650,199 of bonds and other obligations, and had $12,109,340 cash and deposits on December 31. It values its telephone instruments at $11,- 568,960, its real estate at $2,184,730 and its long distance plant at $47,348,591.

President Vail's Report.

President Vail says in part: "At the end of the year 3,000 companies which constituted our system in the United States were 8,887, or 71%, a increase of 740,027 over 1909. Of these 2,852,831 were operated by local, cooperative and other independent companies. The total mileage of wire in use was 11,642,212 miles, of which 3,162,186 were added during the year. Including Canada and Mexico, the Bell system, not including connecting companies, the daily average of toll connections was about 602,- 500, and of exchange connections about 21,681,500, as against corresponding figures in 1909 of 547,999 and 19,525,000. The total daily average for 1910 reaching 22,- 284,000, as of the rate of about 8,130,- 000 per year.

"During the year $50,582,818 was added to the plant and real estate by all the companies, exclusive of connecting companies and $52,028,000 was applied out of the revenue to maintenance and reconstruction.

Absorbing Independents.

President Vail further adds that settlements of oil operating companies and of the American Telephone Company for connections requirements in 1911 have been prepared. It is estimated that about $60,- 000,000 will be required for current additions to the plant in 1911, of which amount some $30,000,000 will be provided by the existing and current resources.

"On December 31, 1910, $111,036,000 of the $150,000,000 convertible bonds sold had been handed in for conversion, leaving outstanding $38,041,000.

"The policy in respect to the opposition and independent telephone systems has been consistently followed through the year. Wherever it could be legally done, and done with the acquiescence of the public, opposition companies have been acquired and merged into the Bell system. Independent companies have been added to the system through sub-license or connecting contracts.

DEATH OF T. T. WILLIAMS

NEW YORK, March 23.—Thomas T. Williams, publisher of the New York Journal, died at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon in his apartments at the Hotel Gotham.

Mr. Williams had been ill less than three weeks. His death was a surprise as well as deep-felt loss to his friends throughout the country. He was in his fifty-sixth year and had been always a man whose vigor of body equalled his vigor of mind.

After he had contracted a heavy cold erysipelas developed, and, despite his strong physique, complications followed. An operation was performed Monday morning, and he rallied immediately afterward, and Thursday night the pressure was sufficient to carry him through the ordeal. He is survived by a widow and a daughter, Miss Helen Williams.

Known from Coast to Coast.

Through indomitable moral courage, keen business sagacity and invulnerable loyalty to his friends, Thomas T. Williams became known and respected from coast to coast during his long career as newspaper editor and manager. At the time of his death he was treasurer of the New York Evening Journal Publishing Company and publisher of the New York Evening Journal.

Mr. Williams was a militant journalist. No man in his profession had a longer list of gallant battles to his credit; none had dealt stouter blows for what he deemed the right; none was ever readier to take up a lost cause from the Atlantic to the Pacific his death is a source of personal grief to every man who knew him well.

For thirty years in California, Chicago and New York he was conspicuous in the newspaper business, and as writer, editor, publisher he figured in every movement that affected the public interest, and his side was always the people's.

He came to California from England when he was hardly more than a boy. One of the cataclysmic mining deals of that period swallowed what fortune he had, and left him penniless. Undismayed by this he was an absolute stranger.

Known to All San Francisco.

He came into journalism by the road of the paragrapher, and the boldness and forthrightness of his comments soon made him known to all San Francisco. He became locally famous as a dramatic critic, and though his severity of judgment might have been expected to hurt the contrary effect, he numbered among his friends many actors of prominence of that day. Booth, McCullough, Barrett were all among his intimates, and of a later day Matilda Barrymore, Charles Coghlan, Henry E. Dixey and Wilton Lackaye were part of his circle. In his dramatic criticism he was as uncompromisingly squere as in his editorials, and many a poor and public deeds in his later work. No friendship was so strong that it availed favor for poor work and no enmity prejudiced his appreciation of fine acting.

Twenty Years on Hearst Papers.

More than twenty years ago he became associated with the Hearst newspapers, in connection with the late Capt. Wasp Coffin, who managed the San Francisco Examiner and brought all his detestable Bohemian and bad habits to the unfailing energy in the people's cause. Though his connection was not as a newspaper manager, he was at heart a writing newspaper man. Every editorial policy bought him back to the production of copy, every crisis developed the desire to write on it; so he was as familiar a figure at Nugent's as in the editorial rooms of Washington, as he was in commercial circles.

The funeral of Mr. Williams will be held at the Hotel Gotham at 3:30 o'clock on Friday evening.

PENSION FIGHT IS WON BY HOAR

It appears to be a bad year at the State House for committee reports. Reconsiderations of committees are being turned down right and left.

The latest man to score a victory is Senator Roger Sherman Hoar of Concord, striving to do something for the instructors at the Concord Reformatory and the State Prison. By a vote of 16 to 8 Senator Hoar has induced the Senate to substitute for a "leave to withdraw" report the original bill, providing that instructors in "any prison or reformatory" who have attained the age of sixty-five and who have been employed for twenty years may be retired from active service and placed upon the pension list.

"Except at Concord and Charlestown," Senator Hoar said, "these instructors are already looked upon as "officers" and are eligible to pension. The bill seeks to correct what appears to be the unintentional discrimination."

The bill had been turned down by the Committee on Public Service. For that committee Senator Thomas C. Mellen said that because of the financial burdens of the Commonwealth, it was thought "unwise to extend the pension system further at this time."

ARNOLD GIRL ON WAY TO CAPE COD

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 23—The latest report concerning Dorothy Arnold, the long missing New York heiress, in circulation here to-day, is to the effect although that she is with George S. Griscom, Jr., on an automobile trip, with Nantucket, Mass., as her destination.

This report follows the mysterious departure of Griscom from the Hotel Chalfonte, where he has been in seclusion for several weeks, and a statement by his chauffeur, Robert Boese, that the auto was to stop at Woodbury, N. J., to take in a woman passenger. Boese said that Griscom planned a six-day trip in Massachusetts.

It was also learned from Boese that Griscom had been in communication with the woman over the telephone, and that the arrangements for the journey had included a proviso that none but the less frequented highways be used and that the larger towns along the route were to be avoided.

That this woman is none other than Dorothy Arnold is the conviction reached by the few persons intimate with Griscom since his arrival in this city.

Griscom left the Chalfonte quietly. The auto had been arranged for at midnight Tuesday. Boese said later that "Dick" Edwards, owner of the car, was at the wheel.

NEW OFFERINGS FOR NEXT WEEK

The disturbance at the South station yesterday afternoon was not a suffragette riot, as many may have suspected, but simply the demonstration from a special train of Victor Herbert and an army of pretty girls who are to make up the bevy of Fritzi Scheff's new operetta, "Mlle. Rosita," which will have its first production on any stage at the Shubert Theatre next Monday evening. Mr. Herbert looked like the commander of a conquering army as he moved out of the train shed at the head of so many fair singers. Joseph Herbert, who merely wrote the book of the opera, was also on hand to see that none of the chorus members went astray. Miss Scheff did not venture to approach Boston on the same train with the company. She did not arrive until to-day. For the next three days there will be a great deal of rehearsal activity at the Shubert theatre, to put the new piece in shape for its initial public performance.

* * *

Mrs. Leslie Carter, whose first great fame as an actress came with her emotional vogue in "Zaza" and other plays of lurid circumstance, will appear at the Majestic next Monday in another passionate drama, "Two Women," written by Hobart Bosworth, who once acted with Mrs. Carter and last touched Boston soil not dramatic in guise for several years, and there is every reason to believe that one wild attract real old-fashioned attention when she comes to town next week.

* * *

John Craig is having trouble getting away from "The End of the Bridge," and he has once more been compelled to withdraw "Why Smith Left Home" to make room for another week of Miss Florence Reed's play, just a crowding the Castle Square Theatre at every performance. Instead of the farce that was announced for next week "The End of the Bridge" will be continued for another two weeks' engagement. Thereafter are showing a decided liking for Miss Lawell's earnest little drama.

* * *

The announcement is made at Symphony Hall that Joseph Hofmann will be the soloist at the pension final concert of the Symphony Orchestra on April 9. A feature of the concert will be the Wagner compositions, which will take up the entire second period.

* * *

There will be a change of bill at the Grand Opera House to-night, when Thomas E. Shea will appear as the star of "A Self-Made Man."

* * *

Among the new attractions at the theatres next week will be Frank Daniels in "The Girl in the Train" at the Colonial, "The Girl from Utah" at the Globe, Miss Leslie Carter in "Two Women" at the Majestic, Fritzi Scheff in "Mlle. Rosita" at the Shubert Theatre and Thomas E. Shea in "The Hells" at the Grand Opera House.

* * *

In addition to the local interest that has been aroused in the production tomorrow of Julia Ward Howe's drama "Hippolytus" at the Tremont Theatre, with Margaret Anglin in the role of Phaedra, several New York managers have arranged to be represented at the theatre that afternoon. George Tyler of Liebler & Co., the firm that is responsible for the production, has delayed his departure for North Africa in order to be present. The fact that Mr. Tyler has just secured the New Theatre in New York gives color to the report that it is more than likely Miss Anglin will appear in "Hippolytus" there during her New York season in the Fall.

* * *

John Craig will give a special performance of George Bernard Shaw's comedy, "Arms and the Man," at the Castle Square Theatre next Tuesday morning for the benefit of the fund for the purchase of the Louisa M. Alcott homestead at Concord. It will begin promptly at 11 o'clock.

CHARGES DEATH PLOT TO WIFE

GLOUCESTER, March 23.—Albert Soula, a fisherman, appeared in court to-day to get his wife $25 for support, although he said yesterday when his case was continued, that he had hesitated about providing for her and his two children on the ground that she had selected a shipmate to throw him into the sea when he was on the Banks. He stated that he heard his wife tell a sailor to make away with him.

This is considered one of the most unique pleas ever made in court here in favor of non-support of a family. Under the persuasion of the Judge he agreed to go to Boston and get the money and also to hand over sufficient sums in the future to feed Mrs. Soula and the children.

Mrs. Soula says he has not contributed to her support for the past three years, when he left home. Since that time she has been living with her parents.

Soula said he was perfectly willing to contribute to the children's support. After he received the information that he was to be compelled to support them, he said he was not wanted at home and so got out.

In response to an inquiry whether he would live with his wife, Soula replied in the negative, but expressed his readiness to give his wife $25, the result of his last voyage.

Judge York declined, in the case of a fisherman, to compel the payment of any set amount of money owing to the uncertainty of a fisherman's calling, but turned the case over to Probation Officer Herron to secure such sums as was consistent with the proceeds of the fishing voyages in which Soula has a share.

ALICE NIELSEN SINGS BOSTON FAREWELL

Miss Alice Nielsen bade farewell to Boston in a gala performance of "Boheme" at the Opera House last night. There was a large audience which had been informed that Miss Nielsen will not return next season because of European engagements and she was tendered an ovation on her first appearance and deluged with flowers at the end of each act. Her Mimi is as charming and pathetic a creation as ever and the pathos of her death scene last night moved many to tears. The Rodolfo of Constantino was also a splendid interpretation, while the rich colorful music of the part is perfectly suited to his golden voice. Fely Dereyne as Musetta, Marcoux, Polese, and the other artists were all admirable, while Mr. Goodrich conducted in a praiseworthy manner.

MUD SAVES LIFE OF BOSTON AERONAUT

PITTSBURG, March 23.—A deep mud puddle saved the life of Paul Berry, of Boston, when a freight train cut a line and dashed S. F. Perkins' car, in which he was making an ascent, to earth Berry fell fifty feet but landed in the mud and was badly bruised but not seriously hurt.

RAPS PASTORS AS ART CRITICS

There's a considerable stir to-day in the Back Bay over an attack on certain clergymen who have been denouncing the nude in art. Dr. F. McKenzie Stevens, an art critic of international repute made the attack in a lecture before the women of the College Club. He cited the opinions of the exhibit at the Museum of Fine Arts expressed by Bishop Malladieu, the Rev. Cortland Myers, the Rev. A. J. Hughes and others. The Dr. Stevens said:

"The men to whom nude and immodest art are one, to whom nude sculpture as such is indecent; still more, to whom nude scriptures are equivalent to living nude bodies, are not only utterly ignorant of the very meaning of art, but they are themselves indecent and impure.

"The sacred and valued things (the speaker was quoting from Dr. Myers' statement) which cannot stand the test of familiarity with the nude in art are neither sacred nor valuable, and if 'such abominations are all right for pagan Greece or Rome, but all wrong for any Christian city' (quoting the Rev. Mr. Hughes), then let us choose paganism rather than Christianity.

"But such men as these do not represent the highest Christianity they are the mere off-scourings of it.

"How unworthy are such squalid souls of the beautiful words of Him whom they presume to call their Maker: 'Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.'

"The endless variance of style shown in artistic representations of similar scenes and objects is in itself proof positive that any definition of art as an imitation of nature is, to say the least, grossly inadequate.

"In the case of the human body: We shall see it very differently according as we feel it as a purely formal harmony, an assemblage of rhythmical lines pure and simple—or as a functional unity, the expression of muscular power—as formal or dynamic shape, subjectively for what it is, objectively for what it means.

"This applies not only to the whole composition, but to each element of it. A ruddy cheek felt as a sign of health will affect us very differently from the same felt purely as a spot or color, or a pallid cheek when we feel it not as a sign of ill health, but as a patch of tinted grey, a value."

TOWN CLERKS WIN A VICTORY

That useful and popular individual known as the Town Clerk has had a lively important victory at the State House in urging the fee events he believes he is entitled to and driving from its field with heavy losses the Fish and Game Commission, the Legislative Committee on Fisheries and Game and the organized sportsmen of the state.

For three years the Commonwealth has compelled hunters to take out a hunting license. The license is made out by city or town clerk. The fee is one dollar. Of this amount the city or town clerk is allowed to hold out fifteen cents. He, or they, asked the Legislature to make it twenty five.

Turned down almost unanimously by the Committee on Fisheries and Game, who recommended "leave to withdraw," the town and city clerks went into the senate, whipped the committee and had the bill passed over the adverse report by a vote of

The fight of the town clerks was led by Senator Jack of North Adams, who said he would make out fifty licenses in the case of "city" clerks their fees go to the city treasury. Senator Clark said that to issue additional clerk hire amounted to so much work that a new might have to be put out of the license.

Senator Gates, who has proven to be the town clerks' best friend, has been busy raising the Fisheries and Game Society's forest heart tells. How hold up most of the license blanks for the inspection of the Secret.

"You want to remember," Senator Gates said, "that most of the town clerks also pound less than $100 a year. These men are employed somewhere else and most calls them away from their work to fill out a license. Then the town clerk has to keep the stove or sheep and go to his office."

The honorable Senate voted 25 to 12 that it is not.

BOTTLERS SIGN NEW AGREEMENT

Eleven of the largest bottling establishments in Boston have signed the new agreement demanded by Brewers & Bottlers' Union No 122, under which the men are given an increase of $3 a week, with an eight hour day for all inside men six months in the year and a nine hour day during the Summer season. The drivers are given the same wage increase, and a straight nine-hour day the year round. Negotiations are under way with several other firms which are expected to make like concessions within a few days.

WHITE SOX PLAYER, HEIR TO MILLIONS, NOT TO QUIT GAME

RUSTLERS TRY TO FIX UP SCHEDULE OF SPRING GAMES

SOX NEAR END OF COAST STAY

By MERTON E. BURKE.

American Correspondent with Red Sox on "Transcontinental" Tour.

Merton E. Burke.

LOS ANGELES, March 23.—Dated as the end of the training season draws near, interest centered in the question of the disposition of the players under the ax to the grindstone. Few changes will be made in the lineup of the team as it is now being developed. Carrigan and Wood are the only new faces to travel through the season with the Sox.

Donovan has not yet announced that he would take the squad from Texas to Boston and meet Harvard on April 11. A few he will send from Chicago to Washington. Heretofore he had planned to line up Carrigan's colts against Harvard, and give the Regulars a straight trail of campaign from Chicago to Washington.

Dow Green acted as umpire again on the ex relay of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, where the Reds had a one-sided game, 5 to 0, with the local team and some professional players.

But for the rain it is expected to-day that Jimmie Walsh will be back in line to play and give the boys an automobile ride through the heart of Los Angeles.

Ray Collins, Harry Hooper, Duffy Lewis and Chief Bender, who left Texas in the air lighter than they came, are hot to get going after several days of rest and relaxation. All that is needed is a little exercise to put them right in shape.

In the Reds' game with the Los Angeles Athletic Club Jimmie Walsh showed up a strong make-up for the box berth, allowing but five hits, while Ray Collins pitched a one-hit game. The Reds have been batting very hard since they left Texas, and Weather like Boston's coming in July.

ENGLISH HIGH GETS DATE WITH ANDOVER

ANDOVER, March 23.—Manager Douglas has announced the Andover base ball schedule for this year. It has been called changed from that of past years. Only three English High school, and two Andover have been issued to the college league. The latter is at Exeter, June

Other schedule is as follows:

April 7, Durfee High, Fall River, at Andover; April 8, Andover at Exeter; April 9, Andover at Phillips Academy, Andover; April 10, Andover at Worcester Academy; April 11, Andover at Holy Cross, Worcester; April 12, Andover at Harvard freshmen at Cambridge; May 2, Andover at Exeter; May 27, Andover at Exeter.

COACH CUDDY MAY GO TO SOMERVILLE

Charles F. Cuddy, athletic instructor at Malden High for three years, may act in the same capacity at Somerville High next Fall.

She Somerville mayors are very desirous of securing Cuddy's services, and have wanted to have Cuddy as coach, who formerly coached Somerville High, return to his old school. It is believed that Cuddy will return to Somerville as a result.

YALE HAS "BEEF" IN ROWING SHELLS

NEW HAVEN, March 23.—The demand for greater weight in the rowing shells sent forth some time ago by Yale rowing authorities, has met with a ready response, according to statistics of the crew squads, which have been compiled at this university. The average weight of the entire squad is given as 171½ pounds, which is but slightly under the average weight of the university crew of last year.

RUSTLER TEAM IN SAD MIXUP

By R. W. LARDNER.

American Correspondent with the Rustlers on Augusta Tour.

R. W. Lardner.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 23.—The opening exhibition schedule of the Boston Rustlers is in such a sad state of disorganization that nobody seems to know what is coming off. There will be games with the New York Highlands, Brooklyn Sox and Augusta Athletics, but when and where is a mystery.

Manager Hugh McBreen to-day announced that he would stick as closely as possible to the original schedule through the south.

Manager Donovan is counting upon the Texas campaign for much of the hard training of the trip. While in California he was given the boys more liberty to go sightseeing than would be the case on an ordinary training tour, and from now on the players must stick to the grindstone.

Few changes will be made in the lineup of the team as it is now being developed. Carrigan and Wood are the only new faces to travel through the season with the Sox.

HARVARD SQUAD OUT ON DIAMOND

The entire Harvard baseball squad is booked for out door practice every day from now on, providing the weather man is good. For the first time this year the squad took to the open yesterday and held a long and practical practice under the watchful eye of the regular varsity diamond and here the candidates were put through their stunts.

The outfielders were put through a step of batting down the aisles on the fresh man diamond. Later the entire squad assembled in the improvised field and went through fielding stunts to their heart's content. The infield candidates all practiced at every position in order to try them out for the different jobs and get a line on which one fitted their various abilities.

March is way in pretty good condition this spring, the variegated weather which we believe is these parts, of late, but the ground was too muddy to send the men out it and at the same time permit of its being put into decent condition for the regular work, which will start on it next week.

The men who were tried at third during the work were Jones, Cowan and Desautels, all of which only went considering the fact that it was their first day a work in the open. Desautels was also given a whack at short, together with Winston and Carr, by a few wild throws.

Second base was held down alternately by Potter and Carr, while the initial sack was covered by Hann and Kennedy, both of the second team last year.

BUSY YEAR FOR CUSHING BOYS

Forty candidates for the baseball team at Cushing Academy have been working out in the gymnasium for the past week, and they are ready to take to the open diamond as soon as the weather becomes a little milder.

The squad is under the watchful eye of the veteran coach, Frank Hanly. The work has been light except for the battery men, who have been given some good stiff workouts.

April 22, Alled High at Ashburnham; 28, Holy Cross Sec ol at Ashburnham; 29 Wentworth Institute of Technology at Ashburnham; May 3, Exeter Academy at Exeter, 6 Mission Academy at Ashburnham, 10 Bradford Durfee Textile at Ashburnham, 11 Lowe, Textile at Ashburnham; 13, Worcham Academy at Ashburnham; 20, Tilton Seminary at Ashburnham; 24 Hartsmith Preparatory at Hanover, 27 Brown Academy at Ashburnham; June 1, Brown Academy at Ashburnham; 3, Shrigfield Preparing School at Ashburnham; 10, Boston College at Ashburnham.

ATHLETICS START HOME.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 23.—The world's baseball champions, the Athletics, are on their way north, but will stop at Columbia and Charleston, S. C., on their way to Philadelphia. Three games will be played at Charleston and the champions will reach Columbia next Monday.

WHO'S WHO WITH THE RED SOX

No. 4.—Thomas J. O'Brien, Pitcher.

Thomas J. O'Brien of Brockton. They call him "Buck" out that way and present him with gold watches when he advances himself in the Great American game. "Buck" was born in Brockton May 10, 1882; first played professional ball with Indianapolis in 1900, went to Evansville of Central League, recalled and traded to Hartford, Ct. Buck's chief dissipation is singing. He delights to warm up his pipes and disturb the peace. Favorite sport, coot stews. He goes down to Marshfield or Nantasket and brings down whole lot of birds with a single shot. Next Fall he is going hunting for deer down Maine.

CHRISTIE WHIPS CRANE.

PLAYER HEIR TO MILLIONS

PHILADELPHIA, March 23.—Russell Blackburn of the Chicago American baseball team will be worth about $2,000,000 in a few years, if he will keep on playing baseball, just like any other player who needs the money to keep the wolf from the door, or, like Jake Stahl, big up building brains. Blackburn will be the "millionaire kid" of the baseball world. Lew Moren of the Chicago National League Club has a big bundle of money, but he will not have to take a back seat as compared to Blackburn. He is getting but a "piker" in the financial world.

NO FIELD YET FOR ARMY-NAVY GAME

PHILADELPHIA, March 23.—Representatives of the athletic committees of Annapolis and West Point met here and Army and Navy football game. No definite agreement as to where the contest will be played or Friday's bleachers will be erected. The contest will be played on Friday's field or at one of the local ball parks will be rented.

WHITE SOX AGAIN WIN.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 23. The Chicago American defeated the San Antonio Texas League team again, 8 to 2. Mets and Brewer of San Antonio and Collins of Chicago made home runs.

JOHNSON'S HEAD HARD AS STEEL

SAN FRANCISCO, March 23.—Jack Johnson's head is about as impregnable as the harveyized steel turret of a battleship. An X-ray examination of the head of the world's champion heavyweight pugilist shows that his skull is the thickest in the world, and that a blow which would kill a steer would hardly jar him.

The time required for a Roentgen ray to penetrate the average person and make a picture on a plate is from five to fifteen seconds. The shortest time in which the big electrical rays could be sent through the muscular and cartilaginous covering of Jack Johnson in order to make a picture of his frame is five and one half minutes.

Fight fans, as a result of this discovery, are wondering if Jeffries, had he known what medical and surgical savants know to-day, would have fought Jack Johnson in Reno last Fourth of July? The leaders of the medical and surgical profession who gathered at the German Hospital in this city to see Jack put through the electrical photographic tests found that his brain cavity has from one-half to three-fourths of an inch protection of skull and that the occipital adhesion is equal to that of a harveyized nickel turret.

The brain cavity of the world's champion is larger than that of the average man, and it is set in a dome which is almost impregnable.

Many celebrated medical and surgical savants gathered to study the interior workings of the world's champion pugilist, and the most intelligent man ever created.

One of the fastest men in amateur basket ball is E. N. Benson of E. Boston, on the Boston Y. M. C. A. five. He first played the game during the season of 1908-1909 on the Y. M. C. A. second team, making the first team the following season. His fast work in covering the floor and passing is always noticeable, and his remarkable shots for the basket have been the feature of many of the games. He also plays a fast game on the diamond

Frankie O'Connor and Tom Flanagan are in fine fettle for their second match. Flanagan is confident that he will reverse the decision gained by his opponent at the opening show at Quincy

Eddie Keaney of Quincy and Joe Egan will put up another interesting mill. The home boxer has been amateur champion and his friends are eager to see just what he is capable of doing in a six round bout

Benny Burke and Sid Burns, two clever featherweights, will open the show with a six round match. Only bona fide members are admitted to these meetings.

K. O. SMITH BEATEN.

NEW YORK, March 23.—In the star bout of 10 rounds at the Princess A. C. Jimmy Sersanie, who was substituted for Eddie O'Keefe, defeated Knockout Smith. Sersanie was too fast and clever for Smith.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS — BY RILEY

HUB HART OF EVERETT THE crack catcher of the last year's college nine has joined the Armours of Tobin Mud Hens of the American Association. There has been no discussion as to salary, and Hub will not quibble any way of the last named team. A compromise affair is to have been effected between the management and player. Hub should prove a power of strength to the Toledo team this year and rank as one of the leading catchers of the American Association.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE PROposed meeting of Champion Al Wolgast and Packey McFarland in New York, April 28, must be taken with a very large grain of salt. It is certain that Wolgast would never consent to let Packey make a weight of 125 pounds or 2 o'clock, upon the day of the battle, and it has never appeared in history that Wolgast wanted any of McFarland's game. There appears to be little foundation for the announcement, which, by the way, came as a great surprise to boxing fans.

JOHNNY KLING, THE ONCE GREAT catcher of the Chicago Cubs, who has reported to the team at last, is apparently having a hard time to get back to form. If spinners very much as if the best days of the former prowler receiver were past. Archer is such a remarkably clever backstop. He is the star in Chicago. The season that Kling remained out of major league baseball worked him a great injury, and it really looks at last as if the water had passed the mill of the famous Dutch man.

ELMER STEELE, THE FORMER RED Sox pitcher, is going exceedingly well this Spring with the Pittsburg Pirates, according to some of the Smoky City correspondents. No infielder who has been here in recent years has proved a greater enigma than Steele.

CYCLONE JOHNNY THOMPSON IS A very clever middleweight boxer, but his demand for a guarantee of $5,000 to appear has been summarily turned down by several Western clubs. Milwaukee and Kansas City put up the shutters upon Thompson and he will have to materially lessen his price before he is given another opportunity to show his skill in the ring.

A LICENSE HAS BEEN ISSUED AS a gentleman rider to Daniel Tuck, a man of this city, by the United Hunt and Steeplechase Association. During the past few years Mr. Tuckerman, who is already more than a boy, has come to the front very rapidly at the leading hunt club meetings held in the East, and as a clever steeplechase rider as well is being very good upon the flat. He should be able to hold his own against all comers this year and be a strong factor as a rider at the Country Club race meeting at Clyde Park in June.

They have a beautiful custom in Borneo—when they catch a criminal for whom hanging is too good, they put a big kettle full of water on the fire, and when it begins to boil, they chuck the villain in. One treatment is usually sufficient. They're going to try it on Desperate Desmond now, or at least they think they are.

This is Mr. Nimrod Jones, the famous faunal naturalist. He has travelled the world over in search of a specimen of the rare and beautiful goo-goo bird, but he has never been able to find one until now. You may think this has nothing to do with the adventures of Claude and Rosamund, but wait, and you shall see.

The reason no one has ever been able to shoot a goo-goo bird is that whenever this suggestous fowl sees a gun pointed at him, he immediately ducks. The only way to get him is to aim about seventeen feet below the spot where he seems to be, but Mr. Jones doesn't know that, and consequently, he doesn't get the bird.

Now here is where Desmond gets into the story again. The kettle of boiling water which was destined to receive his reluctant form happens to be right under the goo-goo when it falls, and the bird is so surprised at getting a warm reception that he proceeds to splatter hot water all over the place.

In the confusion which follows, it is an easy matter for Desmond to grab Rosamond and escape while Claude and the rest are trying to figure out what has occurred. Whether or not Mr. Nimrod Jones succeeds in getting the goo-goo bird we are unable to say, but it would probably not be of much use to him with all the feathers scalded off.

Desmond has carried Rosamond away to a lighthouse near the coast of Borneo and after overpowering the light keeper he has turned on the light so that Claude and the sailors can't follow him. We might make a merry little jest about light housekeeping, but this is a serious matter, and to-morrow's pictures will be still more serious.

Night

Softly the day
Steals like a tender Mother-heart away;
Leaving the infant Night
Cradled in peace. Her squiremonth light
She beareth to the portals of the west.
Then, lingering, turns to watch her child at rest.

Slowly the night
Droopeth in quiet sleep, until the flight,
Drawn from the western sky,
Leaveth her startled, strangely wond'ring
Why,
Alone, unmothered in the dark she lies,
To sob the slumber from her sleepy eyes.

Deep and more deep,
Groweth the darkness, and the lids of sleep
Droop in the old, old way.
Listenier beyond the portals, weary day
Heareth the night mother cease, and hearing, dies.
Whom lo! a myriad stars shine in the skies!

May Is Just a Jilt

By KENNETT HARRIS

When I fell in love with May,
I imagined her delicious.
Everything she had to say
Had a glitter—mysterious;
Then my star seemed most auspicious.
Blue air castles then I built
On foundation superstitious.
May is just a little jilt.

Yet she had a charming way,
Really it was most pernicious.
When it came to making hay,
She was very expeditious.
I, perhaps, was too ambitious,
Cherished hopes too sure to wilt.
Clara, though, is less capricious;
May is just a little jilt.

Then there was the dance to pay.
Came a bounder most officious.
Friday was the fatal day.
I am rather superstitious.
May, I learned, was mysterious,
Liked her lovers richly gilt.
I believe such conduct's vicious—
May is just a little jilt.

LENVOI.

Clara, the fates propitious,
Till we cry for milk that's split,
Happiness you all may wish us.
May is just a little jilt.

The Mystery of a Dancer Who Enthralled a Metropolis

The House With No Address

A Story of Love and Tragedy by E. Nesbit
Copyright by Doubleday, Page & Company

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

Edmund Templar, a rich English youth, recognizes in Sylvia a wonderful dancer, who has hypnotized London, the girl whom he had seen as a child, eight years before, dancing in the forest near his aunt's home. He resolves to seek her after the performance. He finds, however, that she is a mystery to the theatre, the press and the gaiety in general. No one appears to know her name, or her place of abode.

Sylvia lives at the house with no address, cunningly sequestered by Uncle Jesse Mosenthal, and watched over by Aunt Dusa and Denny, the Pan, who pipes on the dancing scene.

Templar hears that Pan has a Summer home at Yalding. He goes boating there in the hope of meeting the youth, and, through him, tracing the girl.

CHAPTER V.—(Continued)

BUT it would have been fun to go on being a detective. And it looked so easy now. All the real difficulties were surmounted. He had only to question the landlord or his amiable wife, or one of their agreeable children . . . and then . . . But he had seen with an enlightenment too full for any rebutting of the mind that this was the sort of thing one didn't do.

Afterward he came to be very glad that he had seen this, and seen it when he did. It was the sort of thing one didn't do.

"But all the same," his reflections ended, "I'm glad I came. I shall stay till Monday."

Templar Plans His Stay

He would not question the landlord or any one else. He would ask no questions. He would just choose the likeliest of the little fleet of old craft that lay below the landing stage and pull up stream. A quiet day between sky and river would be good medicine, would cure the mental lassitude too brought on by light and London and a fancy at loose ends of which he was now ashamedly conscious.

Do not ask whether he had, at the very back of his mind, a poor little devil of a hope that Fate might grant to his inactive what she had denied to his energy. I do not know. And he did not know. But if two people are aboard in boats on a slow narrow river, there may be many chances. He wondered in what craft Pan would take to the water, and imagined a canoe.

His light leap into the boat of his choice brought to his view an iron bar that lay at the bottom of the boat.

"Hullo—I say—catch hold of this iron rod," he said. "I don't want a cargo of nails on board."

"That's the crowbar, sir," said the man who had gotten the boat ready; "you'll want it on the locks. There's no one to put you through—you have to work the locks yourself."

"Take off the rudder," said Templar, and shot out from among the crowd of boats.

The Medway just above the Anchor is a river of dreams. The grey and green of willows and alders mirrored themselves in the still water in tangles hardly less solid-seeming than their living realities. There was pink loose-strife and meadow-sweet creamy and fragrant, forget-me-nots wet and blue, and a tangle of green weeds and leaves and stems that only botanists know the names of.

And, growing out of the rough wall below Stonebam Lock, Our Lady's bedstraw, both the yellow kind and the white. Templar knew it, though he did not know its name. It was of that trailing stuff that the forest dancer's wreath had been woven.

Made Painter Fast

He made his painter fast to the post of the tarred gate that lies across the towing path a stone's throw from the lock, shouldered the crowbar and set out to get the sluice gates up. He was an engineer, and to an engineer the Medway locks of course present no difficulties. So so if you should be a stockbroker, or an artist, or a city clerk, or a poet. In those cases the crowbar and the sluice gates combine to laugh at your inexperience and bite pieces out of your fingers.

He got his boat through the lock, and went on up stream only a very little and dozed by the thought that perhaps the Wood House, which was Pan's country seat, might be down the river, and not up.

He passed three locks—the Medway strings them quite thickly on her silver thread. The last of them was just a round pool with heavy tarred gates above and below, and flowers and long grasses trailing in the water that brimmed it.

The next lock is Oak Weir lock, and there he paused for an easy and half a sluice gates on the other side of the pipe.

There were big trees shadowing a meadow on the left, but the stones by the lock were warm to the hand and the tarred lock-gates were hot.

He lay in the sun, his hat tilted over his eyes, and was glad of the Summer sounds and smells—the water pouring from the full pen over the top of the river. It was good to be here. And he was not quite sure of him if that in the softened mood induced by, muscles gently exercised and the Summer scents and sounds he found himself thinking that he would not have spent a little longer with his great-aunt and great-uncle.

His father and mother were in India, too far away to inspire such regrets and remorses.

The plash and rattle of sculls roused him from something very like sleep. A boat, still invisible, must be coming down stream. If he allowed it to take the lock before he did, he would have to wait while the lock filled and emptied again. Wherefore, if he made haste to get his boat through, the water that rose with him would serve to bring down the other boat.

He got his boat into the lock and tied her painter to the boat-hook stuck in the soft, grassy ground. Then he perceived that the other boat had come out of invisibility and was advancing down the upper river.

He hastened to fix the lower gates and to let down the sluices. Then he ran round to the upper gates and began to raise its sluices.

You raise the sluices of a Medway lock quite simply; you just hike them up by means of your crowbar, whose end fits into square holes in the side of the tall tarred post, that is, so to speak, the handle of the spade that is the sluice. You lever this thing up, one hole at a time, and to prevent its slipping when you have got it up you put in an iron pin that rests horizontally on the top of the lock-gate and holds up the sluice.

If you are careless, you do not move this pin at every step of the crowbar, so that sometimes the pin is in the air, and four or five holes are raised between it and the broad tarred tree trunk that is the top of the lock and also the lever by which the lock is eventually opened.

Now it was just at the moment when the pin was in this Mahomet's coffin-like position that the other boat, creeping silently with the stream, came close above the lock, and suddenly, without warning, bumped its nose against the lock-gate on which Templar was standing. He turned sharply, and almost as he turned he saw that Fate had been kind—kind, incredibly.

"See how wise you were to be good," he told himself; "virtue rewarded, if ever it was."

For the person in the boat, and the only person, was the girl that he had spent time and money and detectives in seeking. It was she—without paint or powder—fresh as the dawn and pretty as a pink.

He knew her on the instant, and knew that she did not know him.

He was never quite sure whether it was accident or design that made him drop the crowbar. He had certainly longed for some incident that should make an interchange of words unavoidable.

Having dropped it, he caught at it with commendable speed, and then got his fingers under the pin just at the instant when the heavy sluice, shaken by the impact of the bar, shouldered and slipped back into its old place. The crowbar splashed in the lock below, as the pin came across his fingers, with all the weight of the sluice to hold it there.

There was only one thing to be said—if one spoke at all. And it is not possible to the ordinary hero to bear, in silence, the smashing down on his fingers of an iron pin enforced by the weight of a sluice gate. If he thought at all, he thought that all the bones of his three fingers were broken. But that is no excuse. He said what he had to say.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Health and Beauty Notes

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Mrs. Ruth O.: There can be no possible excuse for a woman of your age in neglecting her complexion. It is a duty you owe yourself to look as youthful and charming as possible. I would not encourage you to use face powder; it is rather too easily, shows too readily and does no permanent good. The best and does no permanent good. The best cosmetic I know is made by dissolving four ounces of spermaceti in half a pint of best white wine and adding two teaspoonfuls of glycerine will take away that coarse, sallow, oily look to your skin and make it soft, pink and youthful. This lotion is an excellent beautifier and is whitener and will last longer than powder. It is splendid for cold sores, freckles, pimples and preventing chapping in the winds.

Virginia: Lack of exercise and eating too much solid food during the winter months account for your sallow, pimply complexion and loss of energy. What you need is a reliable, system tonic and blood purifier. Try this: Dissolve an ounce of sarsbene in a half pint alcohol, adding one-half cup sugar and hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and in a short time you will feel like a new person. It will give you rich, red blood, fill you with energy and put the color and look of health into your face.

Sibyl H.: It is a shame for a girl of your age to have wrinkles. Try this complexion jelly and you will be surprised how it will clear your skin and smooth out those horrid wrinkles. This tasteless cream jelly can be made by taking one ounce of almonds with half a pint of cold water and two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. Stir and let stand over night. This makes a splendid and inexpensive cream jelly. It will clean the pores, keep the skin free from blackheads and is splendid for chapped hands and face. I find it excellent for reducing the size of large pores in the skin, and for removing tan, freckles and certain forms of pimples. I recommend it for massage purposes; it leaves the skin soft and smooth and contains no grease or oil to cause hair to grow on the face.

Mrs. Edith: You can rid the chin of that fuzzy growth without resorting to the painful electric needle if you get from your druggist an ounce of powdered delatone and with a little water mix into a stiff paste enough to cover the offending hairs. Spread on thickly and let remain two or three minutes, then rub off and wash the skin and you will find the hairs are gone. While delatone is a trifle expensive it does the work quickly and seldom requires a second application.

Isabel R.: Don't be discouraged because your hair is dull, faded and streaky, as you can restore its youthful, glossy blonde tint if you steep an ounce of marlax in a pint of water. You should first wash your head with cantharox, rinse and dry, then wash with the marlax tea, rinse again and dry carefully. Do this, and a little care and effort your hair can be kept a light, golden shade without the least possible danger to hair or scalp.

Miss B. K.: The worry and bother of wearing hair nets and veils to make your hair stay up and conceal that dull, stringy, unkempt appearance you speak of could easily be avoided if you would stop shampooing with soap. The alkali in soap irritates the scalp, makes the hair streaked, dull, coarse and brittle. If you will shampoo every two weeks with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water, your hair will always be light, fluffy and easy to do up, besides looking decidedly neat. This shampoo lathers abundantly, dries quickly, stops itching scalp and cleanses as no other shampoo will. The luxury of extreme cleanliness of the scalp which comes from the use of this shampoo lets nude it no popular that many of the best hairdressers now use it exclusively. It is inexpensive and can be bought at any drug store.

S. D.: Yes—nothing is a more important factor in a beautiful face than bright, clear, youthful eyes. You should use regularly a good eye tonic. Get an ounce of eyrstos; dissolve it in a pint of water and use two or three drops in each eye daily. It will clear and strengthen your eyes, remove all signs of weakness and inflammation and make them bright and sparkling. For weak, watery, expressionless eyes I find this tonic simply wonderful. It is very soothing and is fine for those who wear glasses.

E. B. S.: Although gray hair is sometimes caused by worry, it is generally due to a diseased scalp and is caused by such symptoms as dandruff, itching scalp and brittle, falling hair of which you speak. To restore your scalp to a healthy condition, first keep it clean by shampooing every ten days or two weeks with canthrox, then massage the scalp, using a good genuine hair tonic. You can prepare the tonic yourself by adding one ounce of quinsin to a half pint of alcohol and a half pint of cold water. This is much better than most ready-prepared hair tonics, as it contains nothing to make the hair coarse, sticky or stringy. It will remove the dandruff and stop your hair from coming out. You will find it an ideal dressing for the hair and very refreshing to an itching scalp.

Mrs. L.: What a shame to have wasted so much money in vainly trying to get rid of your fat. I have a formula that some of my close friends have tried with marvelous success. Here it is: Dissolve four ounces of parmotts in 1½ pints hot water; when cold strain and take a tablespoonful of the liquid before each meal. This remedy will not injure your health or force you to starve yourself in order to get back your comely figure. It cuts down fat rapidly, is not expensive and will surely help you.

STATE ST. NEWS FIRMER TONE FOR INVESTORS IN N. Y. STOCKS

A moderate upward movement is anticipated, and this would not be out of keeping with the situation as a whole. However, should not expect large profits, and the consensus of advice is that they be satisfied with small ones.

$ $ $

Sentiment is so cheerful in the Street now that the smallness of the trading on the Stock Exchange has anything but a depressing effect. Things are running along smoothly, the news from Mexico being of an encouraging character, and any action Congress may take not being feared. Nothing but the Supreme Court decision stands in the way, and the feeling is strong that they will not have an ultra-adverse effect.

There is a rather active borrowing demand for stocks. Those who have secured ties are ready enough to accommodate for owners, knowing that the stocks will come back again, in some cases by day or week. The lending is done mostly in Steel common, Reading, Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper, for the reason that each of these more easily. The bears do not like to their game very much, and will get out in the afternoon they are apt to be in again in the morning at the succeeding They do not care to hang on very long.

Missouri Pacific showed some weakness, but that is not surprising. Many conservative financiers expect the stock to sink much lower before it begins its real upward stance. It may be sold on the theory that levels for a few months while bonds are being issued, but the moment the proceeds of the issue for a couple of years unless selling to stay will be the signal for a long period of doubt while the property is being developed into a railroad.

Consolidated Gas acted as though under the influence of political manipulation some brokers fancied they saw the hand of Thomas F. Ryan in the market. A rumor that the dividend would be increased could not be traced beyond speculative circles. Although there is no doubt about the stability of the company to increase its dividend should the directors decide. Earnings and future considered, Consolidated Gas stock is about the most attractive thing in Wall Street from an investment point of view, and perhaps the most dangerous for the margin trader.

Canadian Pacific at the high prices of 220 was a point above the high record made by Union Pacific in 1909. It is now about $30 a share above the last price at which it was selling when Union Pacific made its high record. While Canadian Pacific has been advancing that much, Union Pacific has declined $42 a share. Even with 10 per cent. stocks, Canadian Pacific is a markable strength is due very largely to its huge holdings of agricultural land and to the fact that being in a sparsely settled country every dollar of net earnings is made to earn large profits immediately. The claim that will be made for Union Pacific is that the Canadian Pacific will be worth several dollars a share in addition to the dividend Wisconsin Central and "Soo," its subsidiary properties, were strong.

More stocks of new gold companies in the Porcupine district of Canada have made their appearance during the week. Curb, Hollinger, Preston, East Dome and Porcupine Central. The latter has been remarkably rich ore in spots, but up to date there are not enough of such spots to make mines. These are the issues which is owned by the Standard Oil people, Rockefeller and the Hollinger, which is controlled by Isaac Thompson. Many millions in the stock of the latter company has been sold to the public. Stock of the Hollinger was issued at $2.50, and sales are being made at 80. The Tisdale Company, which owns the Hollinger, has been on syndicate properties, has done considerable development work, but is not a mine yet, and none of the stock is for sale.

ARTHUR H. MERRITT LEAVES CHAPIN & CO.

Arthur H. Merritt has resigned his position as New England manager of Chapin & Company, Inc., Chapin & Gore building, the largest and oldest millfeed dealer in the country, with which he has been connected for over sixteen years. On April 1st he will open a Boston branch. Merritt will become associated with the Frank-lin P. Shumway Company, one of the leading advertising agents, Jewelers Building, Boston. He brings to them a thorough knowledge of New England's trade conditions, and a large acquaintance with the leading men, which will prove invaluable in still further extending the already very large clientele now enjoyed by the Shumway agency. With the prestige of this agency which handles many high class publications for many of the leading manufacturers and merchants in the country, the well-known energy of Mr. Merritt, he should experience no difficulty in developing many new advertising accounts. His many friends in the grain, flour and feed business all wish him the greatest success.

NEW YORK, March 23.—Firmness was displayed in the stock market to-day, with Canadian Pacific a strong leader, opening 3½ above last night's close. While the volume of trading was not broad, the undertone was steady. The railroad shares were well supported in the first trading with the following gains noted: Reading ¾, Missouri Pacific ¾, Union Pacific ½, St. Paul opened unchanged. Steel opened ¼ higher and Amalgamated Copper was unchanged from last night's close.

Some dullness developed after the first fifteen minutes' dealing, professional sentiment was generally bearish, the argument being that there is nothing to cause an advance. The bogeyman of the United States Supreme Court decisions in the anti-trust cases continues to be a factor. The curb market opened quiet. American shares in London were the subject of professional operations, although they held well. Mexicans on the London market developed unexpected strength today, although no specific cause was given for this.

The Kissing Theory a la Mode

DOCTOR DEFENDS KISSING OF BABY

If a baby—almost any ordinary baby, blinking blue eyes, dimpled cheeks soft as red roses petals, smiles cavorting in every corner of its face—it such a baby mockers its lips into a pouting appeal—it?

Dispatches tell of a fad come over to New York from Spain. Not long ago Queen Victoria decided the laws of hygiene were transgressed when her babies were kissed. So one had some buttons made and the ladies were tagged with the formal notice "No me besse" (don't kiss me). The anti-kissing buttons have spread in some of the smarter sets in the East.

But a Chicago physician enters the fray as the champion of thousands of Chicago babies who would be kissed and says not to kiss babies is to be cruel.

Who, if a baby isn't kissed properly and by friendly lips, is likely to grow up into a pessimist, or a woman hater, or a man eater, or even a bank robber?

A baby needs a kiss just as it needs breakfast," says Dr. Isaac Ferreter, a member of the staff of the German-American Hospital in Chicago.

Prohibition of kissing is a crime against motherhood and child birth. It so happens that a baby's emotional and intellectual nature must be developed at the same time that we are looking after the growth of its legs.

RACERS READY AT PABLO BEACH

By J. C. KERRISON.

Commencing on Monday, the interest of the automobile world will be centered in the big contests that will then be inaugurated at Pablo Beach near St. Augustine. All of the big racing men and racing cars have either arrived or are on their way to the scene of the coming contests.

The people are looking forward to a fracturing of records from the kilometer to the 200-mile. It will not be surprising if the records established by Teisfaaf at Los Angeles on Sunday are battered to pieces, especially since the most famous of drivers are entered for the contest.

* * *

The Fairmount Park Commission of Philadelphia has granted permission for the use of the roadways in that park for an automobile contest on October 7 next. This sanction assures what has come to be one of the most picturesque automobile contests in the country, and the Quaker City Club is already arranging details and perfecting plans for the race.

Sales Manager Harry Fosdick, of the Stevens-Duryea Company, has within the short time he has been connected with the Springfield concern done considerable work that will bear fruit in the very near future.

On Tuesday, he established a branch of the home company in the city of Los Angeles, which is said to be one of the best managed and profitable that the Stevens has in its circuit. Besides establishing this branch, Mr. Fosdick secured the services of Arthur W. Barker, who has resigned from the Chalmers Company to assume the duties of western sales manager on the Stevens Company with headquarters in Chicago.

Prior to going with the Chalmers Company, Mr. Barker was for years the assistant sales manager of the Stevens factory, having the Stevens agency at about the same time as did Mr. Hibbard-quand. Mr. Barker's many Stevens' success is like the return of a man to his family, as he was always closely allied with the Stevens outfit.

* * *

Teddy Teisfaaf averaged eighty-one miles an hour in winning his 100-mile match race with Barney Oldfield at the Los Angeles Speedway last Sunday, when he broke all American records recently made by the Californian. Teisfaaf recently left the employ of western sales manager on the Stevens Company with headquarters in Chicago.

Harroun's record for four years was made on a Marmon equipped with Michelin tires. Teisfaaf's Ile Locket, and De Palma's 60-horsepower Flat were also equipped with Michelin tires in the Indianapolis contest.

The Massachusetts Automobile Operators' Association will hold its annual spring smoke talk at the Club House, No. 204 Dartmouth street this evening. The entertainment committee has procured a number of professional and amateur talent. After the entertainment there will be served a collation. All operators of motor vehicles are cordially invited to attend.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 87

Advertising a Specialty Store

A Specialty Store needs to advertise because it reaches a special class and hasn't the power of the ordinary store to get its market through interesting in the specialties people who come in to see other lines of goods. Most of the large department stores have Specialty Departments to which their general advertising attracts customers.

There is in Boston a store that makes a specialty of small clothes for small people. The idea is an excellent one and there is no reason why that store shouldn't be many times its size it is. But the policy of the store has never been to aggressively and persistently advertise its lines in an interesting and informative way.

A store in New York, starting in a similar way, has built up a national business. This Boston store could certainly build up a magnificent New England business if its advertising were bigger and more persistent.

It is far easier to advertise a special line than it is a general line and the store which can sell children's and little people's apparel of various kinds has a golden opportunity to secure an extensive business.

The circulation of the Boston American in the New England field is so large and is particularly so forceful around Boston that it presents the very opportunity that such a store needs. If its quality circulation is only 10% of its general circulation that would make its quality circulation about 40,000. This figure is larger than the daily circulation of Boston's most exclusive evening paper. If you will note the people who read the Boston American on your way home at night you will see the wide general circulation that it has and that it reaches the most exclusive people as well as the most democratic.

Address Trade Aid Department, Boston American, for particulars as to just what this means.

HIGHWAY BILL PASSED.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 23.—The Senate to-day passed the bill providing for a highway from New York to Montreal.

MILK FAMINE IS THREATENED

Boston is threatened with a milk famine after April 1, because of the impending clash between the milk producers and the contractors. Many of the producers in the middle section of the State announce they will refuse to ship their milk to Boston contractors at the price of twenty-five cents a can. Read by the latter after April 1.

The contractors are now paying thirty-five cents a can, but assert the Saunders law makes it necessary for them to pay the usual Summer price of twenty-eight cents or the inspectors at a loss. Indeed dent milk peddlers are, however, paying the producers' New Braintree, one of the important milk centres, thirty-seven cents a can and have told the producers they will not pay the increased price to the friend of the Boston contractors. It is expected the New Braintree output of 5,000 cans a day will be doubled after April 1.

CO-DEPOSITOR MAY DRAW CASH

This is just a little paragraph for those who have deposits in banks.

Are you a depositor jointly with another person? Do you know that shortly—unless the Governor vetoes the bill about to be laid upon his desk—it will be possible for your co-depositor to draw the entire deposit without your knowledge or consent? That is what it looks like.

The honorable Senate has just joined with the House in passing this law:

When a deposit has been made, or shall hereafter be made, in any bank, savings bank or institution for savings, in the names of two persons, payable to either, or payable to either or the survivor of such deposit, or any part thereof, or interest or dividend thereon, if not then attached at law or in equity in a suit against either of said persons, may be paid to either of said persons, whether the other be living or not, and such payment shall discharge the bank, savings bank or institution for savings making such payment from its obligation, of any, to such other person or his legal representatives for or on account of such deposit.

For the purpose of this act the term "bank" shall include any person or institution of persons carrying on the business of banking whether incorporated or not.

Senator Malley of Springfield endeavored to have the last sentence stricken from the bill. Senator White of the Cape demanded to know "why?" White is chairman of the Committee on Banks and Banking.

Malley called it a "joker." He intimated that it might be beneficial to folks who advertise themselves to be "bankers," but who are under no supervision.

The Malley amendment was rejected 5 to 16, and the bill passed to be engrossed in concurrence with the House.

WOOL PRODUCERS ACCUSE RAILROADS

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The National Wool Growers' Association to-day requested the Interstate Commerce Commission that twenty railroads charge excessive rates from producing territory to the eastern markets. Advances on class and commodity rates filed with the commission by railroads running between Oklahoma and Texas were suspended to-day pending a hearing.

T. T. Williams Is Dead.

A Brave and Generous Man, a Faithful Friend.

T. T. Williams died in New York city yesterday, after a brief illness. This message will carry sorrow to the hearts of men all over this country. All the good things that one man can say of another, Tom Williams's many friends would say of him—and speak from their hearts.

He was a brave man, and this he had proved in every day and year of his life. He displayed his physical bravery in the early days of adventure and danger in the Far West. He was brave morally and mentally as well as physically. He feared and accepted no man, no opinion, no accepted idea that did not meet his own standard of right. He was as courageous and determined in defence of the weak, and of a just cause that needed help, as he was in repelling aggression or influence that affected himself personally.

Tom Williams was a faithful, loyal friend. In spite of his rugged and sometimes stern aspect, his friends felt for him the sincerest, deepest affection. Many and many of them will regret bitterly to-day that they could not say goodby; that they could not take his hand at the last and tell him of their sorrow at his going. His strong face, kindly smile and piercing eye are clear in the memory, even of those who have not seen him for years. How much will he be missed by those that met him daily, whose lives were bound up with his, who found in his enthusiasm, courage and determination, even in failing health, an inspiration and an example that put to shame younger men about him!

A noble and an honest heart stopped beating when Tom Williams left this life. He was not only honest to others, but honest to himself. He did not deceive himself, but in matters affecting his own interests he was more stern than in his judgments upon others. Those that knew him best and longest were those that trusted him absolutely.

Tom Williams was a fair man, respected, admired and loved by those that were associated with him—in whatever capacity. Thousands of mechanics and other employes have worked under his orders. Every one will hear with sincere sorrow the sad news of his death; every one will bear tribute to his integrity, his fairness, his absolute sense of right. The complaint of the least important working man on his payroll received from T. T. Williams the same attention, fair and unbiased, as a complaint from the most important and powerful man with whom he might have business dealings.

T. T. Williams was above all a Democrat in the real sense of the word. He was a believer in equality. He recognized no superiority, except the superiority of achievement, intellectual power and integrity. And as he saw no superior in those with whom he dealt in the world of business and competition, so also he saw no inferiors in those that depended upon him as employes and upon his sense of justice.

He was a man, respecting other men. What he saw in his fellow creatures, was the man himself, not the veneer. He was a kindly but severe and relentless critic. Many a man owes his success to the fact that from Tom Williams he got the truth, plain and unvarnished, at times when the truth was badly needed.

The loss of such a man, dead in his prime of usefulness to the world and at the height of his powers, is a calamity and a mystery to one that would seek to explain the oldest of all mysteries.

This may surely be said of the man who is gone. Whatever fate that awaits those leaving this earth, Tom Williams need not fear the ordeal. And those that loved him need not fear for him, nor for his ability to rank with the best of those that have gone before him. He would be welcomed in the halls of Walhalla as a fighting man, just and fearless, and still more welcome in the gentler Heaven of Christianity where kindness rules. For Tom Williams was a charitable, a kind and a generous man. He pitied the weak and friendless, and he helped them. He despised injustice, and persistently fought it. His whole life is a long story of combat, struggle, hard and honest work. Two incidents of the end of his life show what type of man he was.

At a public gathering a certain shameless official, clothed with power and surrounded by sycophants, libelled an absent man. The man traduced was a friend of Tom Williams, and while other friends sat supine, it was Tom Williams that strode through the room and called the traducer a liar and a coward to his face. That is one picture of the man.

A few weeks ago, when his health was failing and the illness that destroyed him already had hold upon him, he saw as he stepped from the elevator in an office building a boy, poorly clad, tired and hungry looking.

The boy was carrying a heavy burden when Tom Williams stopped him.

"How old are you?" The boy answered.

"Too young to carry such a load," said Tom Williams, and asked, "How many hours a day do you work?" The boy answered.

"Too many hours for a boy like you. Come to my office tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. Here is the address."

Two days afterward the man who had heard this conversation saw the small boy, dressed in new clothing that Tom Williams had bought him, important and happy in a task suited to his years and strength that Tom Williams had given him. Many such boys, and many men and many women, have had cause to be thankful for the life and the character of the man who is gone.

No honest man ever met him and failed to respect him. No man that really knew him but will bitterly regret his death.

With the development and growth of the Hearst newspapers throughout this country Mr. Williams has been intimately associated for many years.

When W. R. Hearst assumed the management of the San Francisco Examiner C. T. Williams was one of the first to join in the work. He became associated in newspaper work with W. R. Hearst nearly twenty-five years ago, and since that time has been the valued friend, helper and adviser of all connected with the Hearst newspaper enterprises. He was as widely known in his profession as any man in the United States, universally admired and respected.

He was faithful to his friends, just in all his dealings. He was a good and brave man.

No Mystery Is Too Baffling for Him

I LOANED OUT A SADDLE HORSE YESTERDAY AND I HAVEN'T SEEN HIDE OR HAIR OF HIM SINCE!
TAKE US TO YOUR LIVERY STABLE.
HE WAS A RESPECTABLE-LOOKING OLD PARTY SO I DIDN'T ASK HIS NAME!
VERY UNFORTUNATE, EGAD!
THE GROUND HAS FROZEN OVER NIGHT, MAKING THE HORSE'S TRACKS EASY TO FOLLOW!
HE TURNED IN HERE, BUT DID NOT COME OUT AGAIN!
TO COUNTRY TAVERN
A MAN ON HORSEBACK CAME HERE YESTERDAY—
AS I LIVE!
YES, AND HE WENT AWAY LEAVING HIS HORSE TIED IN THE YARD!
STRANGE!
WATSO, I THINK I KNOW WHO THE MAN WAS
YOU MEAN—
DIDN'T I FORGET SOMETHING WHEN I WAS HERE YESTERDAY?
NOTHING MUCH—ONLY A SADDLE HORSE!
FORGETTO!
TO BE SURE!

Christian Science Makes Reply to Dr. Parkhurst

By EUGENE R. COX

The Cole case is before the New York courts, but it is of interest to Christian Scientists in Boston and everywhere else as well. Mr. Cox is a member of the Christian Science Committee on Publication.

THE publication in the AMERICAN of Dr. Parkhurst's article on the Cole case has directed anew public attention thereto, and a brief resume of the steps hitherto taken may be of interest.

A lady went to Mr. Cole stating that she had heart trouble and desired to be healed by Christian Science treatment. She testified that Mr. Cole stated that Christian Science treatment consisted of prayer, and that in compliance with her request he sat for about fifteen minutes with eyes partially closed.

Mr. Cole testified that during this time he was engaged in prayer.

The complaint which she swore out, alleging that this transaction constituted a misdemeanor, and on which complaint a warrant for his arrest was issued, was held defective, and Mr. Cole was discharged by the examining magistrate.

The attention of the County Medical Society, however, being thus directed to the case, its attorneys became active, and Mr. Cole is now awaiting indictment as a malefactor.

An interesting phase of the case is that the County Medical Society claims to be desirous of testing the law which exempts from the provisions of the medical practice act those practising the religious tenets of a church.

Exemption Framed by Medical Society Itself

This is interesting because this exemption was put in the law by the attorney for the County Medical Society when it was framed, four years ago, AND NO CASE OF ITS BEING INVOKED IN THE DEFENCE OF ANY CHRISTIAN SCIENCE PRACTITIONER IS ON RECORD. Silence it is somewhat difficult to understand the sudden desire for its judicial interpretation.

Light might be thrown on the subject, however, by the knowledge that the Legislatures of many States have now pending before them legislation proposed to extend and enforce monopoly in healing, and that earnest and vigorous efforts were made by the American Medical Association to procure national legislation by Congress to the same end, all indicating a general movement to prevent, by law, any healing of disease except by materia medica.

Musicians do not muster harmony from the study of discord; artists do not learn of symmetry by the study of deformity, and bankers do not learn good money or good money by studying counterfeits; and harmony, symmetry and good money are recognized as real and true, while discords, deformities and counterfeits are abnormal, wrong and erroneous.

Christian Scientists, recognizing God as the only and omnipotent Creator, know that health is the heritage of all, and any other condition is erroneous.

A discord may not jar the uneducated ear. A deformity may not appear hideous to the unenlightened eye, and a counterfeit may seem real to the ignorant until the truth is known concerning each; and when it is known the erroneous beliefs of banker, artist and musician disappear.

In Like Manner the Belief in Disease Is Dissipated

In like manner the belief in disease is dissipated and overcome by the declaration of truth concerning man and his relationship to his Creator.

Dr. Parkhurst is right in saying that a Christian Science practitioner does not claim to do anything but pray for the patient. This prayer, however, is not a vain repetition of words, but is a conscious realization of the true thing made in the image and likeness of God.

The function of the Christian Science practitioner has been well likened to that of the lamplighter, or of him who turns on an electric light in a dark room. The darkness disappears; the lamplighter is not himself the light nor does he dispel the darkness.

Again the relationship of patient and practitioner may be compared to that of the child who has not grown sufficiently to reach the button and asks some one of more stature to push the button and turn on the light.

Throughout Mrs. Eddy's writings purity, spirituality and compassion are declared to be essential to doing the works which Jesus did and enjoined upon his followers.

We read in the New Testament that those who sowed spiritual things reaped a material reward, and no one questions the propriety thereof.

In this day money has been made a convenient measure and medium of exchange, and is the normal and natural equivalent for services rendered, and a Christian Science practitioner should no more be censured for accepting a money payment than should St. Paul for accepting board and raiment.

Dr. Parkhurst seems to expect the jury to disagree because of religious prejudice for or against Christian Science, but, on the facts and law involved in this case, nothing but acquittal is to be expected, if, indeed, any Grand Jury finds it possible to find an indictment.

The Good Old Days

By PERCY S...W

I'VE often wondered what they did
To rob the modern henpecked kid
Of pleasures once his own.
It almost seems as if mankind
Should long have passed away
Without the marvels of the mind
They try on us to-day.

Folks never made their children learn
To brush their teeth at three;
Nor prodded them with tears to spurn
All sorts of jollity.
They never fed them germless foods,
Nor gave them spers to wear,
Nor taught them how to banish moods,
Nor begged them not to swear.

And yet, if history is true,
Those kids in olden days
Could put it over me and you
In half a dozen ways.
They'd throw a bluff and throw a spear,
And throw it straight, at that;
They never had to jump with fear
When dust was on their hat.

Say, what's the use to pound and pound
All morning on the box,
Then never dare to make a sound
When pa is reading stocks?
Give the times in story books,
When every one was bold;
Say, what's the good of living, shucks,
If kids is all born old?

America, Woman's Eden

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

IT is a great privilege for a woman to be reared in America.

Let every girl in every nook and corner of our republic realize this fact. Not to grow into intelligent and useful womanhood in America, not to use the innumerable advantages and opportunities which are free to all, is little short of a sin.

In no other country in the world are the chances for development and the avenues for usefulness so many as in America.

Nowhere, outside of America, is education made so possible for poor girls.

The child who uses the time, when attendance at school is compulsory, in serious study, cannot fail to lay the first foundation of an education.

However limited may be her opportunities for schooling after the compulsory period, our libraries open doors for wider learning to the persevering, and our newspapers and magazines, obtainable for a few pennies, or found free in library reading rooms, will make ignorance impossible for the ambitious young girl in any station of life in America.

Inspiration to Womanhood

The whole mental atmosphere in our land is stimulating and encouraging to aspiring womanhood.

One realizes it more fully when visiting other lands and comparing the conditions surrounding women with those in America.

Even in England the poor girl in shop or factory or in a humble peasant home lacks the opportunities for schooling and reading which are open to one and all in our country. She lacks, too, that large outlook which makes every American girl feel that it is possible for her to attain to any position in life if she fits herself for it.

In every European country there is the same difference in the condition of women.

Only the favored few can afford an education, and, after having obtained it, the difficulties are often almost insurmountable when an attempt is made to advantageously apply knowledge. Everywhere, in every land, there are mental fetters, made of old traditions, placed on women's freedom, everywhere save in America.

In the Orient these fetters are so many and so heavy that it will require centuries to remove them.

The Women of the Orient

The Japanese women, the Chinese women, the Hindu women, the Javanese, the Malay, are all regarded as mere breeders of male children and creatures on whom education would be wasted and to whom liberty would be dangerous.

The march of civilization, the contact with the commerce of the world, the efforts of missions, all make changes in these Eastern lands, and here and there one finds in Japan, in China, in India, a woman who has obtained a fair education, and who has dared to fit herself to fill some useful, self-supporting position. But she is regarded as a pioneer wherever met, and never fails to suffer the discomforts and discouragements of all pioneers and to meet with the disapproval of the majority of her own race.

It will require a thousand years to give woman in general any real liberty of thought or action in the Orient, to awaken her mind to an understanding of its own powers, and to enable her to use those powers after they are awakened.

Thank God for It

If you are an American girl thank God for it and for your opportunities and liberties.

And USE THEM to build yourself into noble, intelligent, virtuous, useful womanhood.

Nowhere else on earth could you have so many doors open to you.
